Search locates crash victims

THAYER, Mo. (AP) — Aerial searchers spotted the wrecked plane and ground parties Friday recovered the bodies of a pilot from Cabool, Mo., and his woman passenger.

The Missouri Highway Patrol identified them as Jimmie Lee Matherly, 50, and Suzanne Kjellberg, 33, also from Caboool.

The plane disappeared after taking off about 7 o'clock Thursday night from the Thayer airport on a flight to Cabool, about 60 miles northeast of Thayer in the south-central Missouri Ozarks.

Investigators reported there was a heavy fog and mist when the plane took off, and some points in the area reported three inches and more of rain during the night.

A search started after the plane was reported missing Friday morning. Four pilots from Willow Springs, Mo., Carl Hopkins, Nick Matherly, Bill Cobband and Joe Gilliam, flew over the area, picked up an automatic distress signal from the downed Cessna 182 and directed ground crews to it.

Because of soft ground and mud, emergency vehicles had difficulty reaching the wreckage in a wooded gully about four miles west of the Thayer airport.

Sheriff Joe Hawkins reported the plane apparently spunt into the ground.

A coroner's jury was sworn in at Thayer to view the bodies and sit at a later inquest.

The Howell County sheriff's office at West Plains said it got a report about 7:30 Thursday night that a low-flying plane apparently was in trouble southwest of town.

The pilot then was no more than three or four minutes from the West Plains airport but he apparently tried to return to Thayer, about 20 miles east of his position and just above the Arkansas line.

Lawyer draws jail, fines for evasion

ST. LOUIS — Raymond Klemp, 64, a Caruthersville attorney, was sentenced by U. S. District Judge John K. Regan on three counts of willfully failing to plainly file his income tax returns for years 1968, 1969 and 1970.

Klemp was sentenced on the first count to a three-month prison term and fined $1,000. On the second and third counts, he was fined $1,000 on each.

The maximum penalty on each count could have been one year in prison, $10,000 fine, or both.

Klemp was found guilty by a jury in Cape Girardeau on Nov. 25 on all counts of a three-count criminal information which charged him with willful failure to plainly file his return for those years, when he had gross income of $33,771 in 1968, $35,486 in 1969 and $30,269 in 1970.

In addition to the sentence imposed, Klemp is also liable for all taxes, penalties and interest.

The case was investigated by Internal Revenue Service agents and presented in court by Michael W. Reat, assistant to U.S. Attorney Donald Stohr.

52 years at the trade

Jim Hackett, at work on one of the thousands of haircuts he has produced, celebrated his 52nd year as a barber Friday. Hackett started his career in Thayer as a 17-year-old high school junior, working before and after school and on Saturdays.

State jobless rate hits high

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Unemployment in Missouri soared to the highest level in almost two decades last month, jumping to 6.2 per cent.

And state officials predicted Friday the rate of unemployed will climb to 6.8 per cent by late February.

Figures from the state Division of Employment Security show that about 125,000 Missourians were out of work in December, representing a full percentage point increase over November's 5.2 per cent unemployment rate.

"You'd have to go to the late 50's to find a comparable unemployment situation," said Tom Righthouse, chief of research and analysis of the Employment Division.

About half of the unemployed persons are from the construction, wholesale and retail trade, and garment and automobile manufacturing industries, said Righthouse.

Righthouse said the division is projecting unemployment to be 6.5 per cent for January before rising to 6.8 per cent in late February.

"We're hoping it will back down a little in March and April," he said, noting the warmer weather should help the construction industry.

Despite the growing number of unemployed Missourians, the state still is faring better than the nation as a whole.

The federal government's most recent figures showed unemployment nationally standing at the seasonally adjusted 7.1 per cent rate.

But the raw rate, which Righthouse said is comparable to Missouri's calculations, stood at 6.7 per cent.

"So we're still running one half to one per cent below the national unemployment level," Righthouse said.

Nonetheless, in a speech delivered Friday by Gov. Christopher S. Bond in Crestwood, he said "Assuring adequate job opportunities for Missourians is our highest priority in state government. I am concerned especially about the St. Louis area where there are some 45,000 persons unemployed."

In his annual message Wednesday, Bond urged the Missouri General Assembly to increase benefits to the unemployed from the present maximum of $67 a week to $90 a week.

The governor also noted in his speech Friday that "we will be working with local governments to provide 1,200 temporary public service employment jobs, funded by the federal government, which can provide needed community facilities as well as employment for those out of work."

In addition, various bills increasing workmen's compensation benefits in light of the economy will be considered by the legislature this session.

With the increased number of unemployed, the Employment Security Division's payments to persons out of jobs wre up 98.7 per cent from a year ago in December to $11.75 million.

The average weekly benefit check issued last month also jumped to an all-time high of $54.34.

Weather-related accidents kill 3

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Snow spread into northwestern and southwestern Missouri late Friday, but heavy rain took its toll in the southcentral part of the state early in the day.

Three persons died in weather-related accidents during thunderstorms that started the previous night and dumped up to 4 inches of rain in the Willow Springs and St. Charles areas.

Two persons who flew out of the Thayer airport in a heavy thunderstorm Thursday night were found in the wreckage of their plane Friday afternoon a few miles away. An 18-year-old St. Clair man was killed Fridaywhen his car skidded out of control after hitting a puddle of water on Missouri 13 and crashed into a utility pole.

A woman from Brixey was more fortunate.

Her car was washed off a low-water bridge on a gravel road near Gainesville early Friday by flash flood waters from Spring Creek. She was trapped in the car for more than four hours and was thought by rescuers to be dead.

She was being treated late Fridy at a hospital in Mansfield, where she was reported to be in satisfactory condition.

"It's a miracle she wasn't drowned," said Sheriff Herman Pierce of Ozark County about the woman, Mildred Otterbacker, 60.

"The car was completely submerged for ahile, but there must have been an air pocket so she could breathe. She was in it for four hours. The water was icy cold."

Pierce said Mrs. Otterbacker's husband, John, managed to get out of the car, swim to shore and notify authorities, but then was prevented from getting back to the car because of the swift current and deep water. The car was about 200 feet from shore.

The sheriff said people at the scene told him the woman was dead but he heard cries from the car.

"I tied a rope around my waist and waded out there, but the doors wouldn't open. We finally had to drag the car out to get the woman," he said.

High water in Potter Creek east of Cabool washed out a section of track and sent two engines of a Frisco Railway freight train plunging into the water Friday morning.

Thirty-seven freight cars — 18 of them loaded with carpets, clothing, cigarettes, fertilizer, canned goods and bther items — also derailed, but 58 other cars remained on the tracks.

Tom McKee, 55, of Springfield, the engineer of the train, and Al Cole of Springfield, a fireman, were stranded on the engine in the middle of Potter Creek for a couple hours. Rescuers were thwarted from reaching them because of the high water.

Both men were later taken to a hospital for treatment of bruises and lacerations.

One witness said the banks of the creek looked like a trash dump, with a couple dozen people walking through the mud with armloads of spilled merchandise.

"We won't be able to salvage very much of the merchandise," said a railroad spokesman.

The train was en route from Memphis to Kansas City. A Frisco spokesman said it would probably be Sunday before the tracks could be repaired.

Youth stabbed near East Prairie school

EAST PRAIRIE — Thomas Caldwell, 14, of East Prairie was stabbed in the stomach by another 14-year-old East Prairie youth about 12:25 p.m. Friday near the junior high school.

The injured youth was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital at Sikeston, where he was treated and released, according to police officer Jim Baker.

Two or three other boys reportedly were involved in the incident and, prior to the stabbing, had threatened to whip the boy who stabbed Caldwell.

The weapon, believed to be a pocket knife, has not been found.

The youth accused of the stabbing was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Barber on the job 52 years and still going

On January 10, 1923, Jim Hackett returned home from a freight ride to Jonesboro, Ark., with his apprentice license to become a barber in Thayer, Mo. His work schedule ran before and after school on weekdays and all day on Saturdays because Hackett was only 17 and a high school junior at the time.

The three year apprenticeship ended and Hackett moved on to West Plains. Barbering and semi-pro baseball mixed with time out to find a wife kept him occupied until 1936when he moved to a shop in Cabool. The year 1938 saw three moves for the Hackets — first to Sikeston, then to Morehouse and finally to New Madrid, where they stayed until 1951 when they returned to Sikeston for good.

Hackett only barbers part time now at Model Barber Shop, 127 N. New Madrid St., and spends much of his time playing golf. He says that when he started in the trade, barbers were still using hand clippers and, when the shop he worked in finally got electric ones, there were only two pairs that were passed between the four barbers.

Another memory of the old shops is one of a whole wall lined with the customer's personal shaving cups.

Hackett also said that when he first began barbering, there were no beauty shops and all the women came to the barber shop to have their hair "bobbed" in the latest fashion.

Hackett's barbering career is filled with a lot of memories like that. That comes from 52 years at the same job.

Jewelry items taken

Burglars stole several pieces of jewelry from the Lillas Heacox home, 925 Lake St., sometime between Nov. 11 and Jan. 1, police reported Friday night.

Taken were two diamond rings, two watches, three pairs of earrings and a transistor radio.

Police said entry was apparently gained through a bedroom window, where a hole had been cut in a window screen near the lock.

No value was given on the missing items.

Rural home ransacked

NEW MADRID — Roger Patterson, Route One, reported to the New Madrid County sheriff's department at 7:30 p.m Friday that his house, located two miles west of town on Route U, had been entered between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Friday.

He said three jewelry boxes had been searched and a bedroom closet and drawers ransacked.

Two antique knicknacks had been taken off a shelf and a silver dollar was missing.

A screwdriver was used to open a back door, according to the investigation report.

Hearnes probe reported to involve tax evasion

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A federal grand jury is investigating the personal finances of former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and his wife and possible income tax violations, an assistant U.S. attorney said during a hearing Friday.

Paul Anthony White, who has spearheaded a two-year investigation into possible corruption during the Hearnes Administration, made the disclosure at a hearing before Judge William H. Becker of U.S. District Court.

He said the grand jury's investigation includes possible income tax evasion and making false statements on a federal tax return, as well as extortion under the color of official right and mail fraud.

The hearing was on a motion to quash subpoenas served on the president of the Farmers Bank of Portageville for records relating to the ex-governor's personal finances. Judge Becker refused to quash the subpoenas but modified one of them.

Hearnes said at his home in Charleston Friday that the investigation is politically motivated and designed to help White make a name for himself.

"I've paid all the taxes I owe," said Hearnes, who served as governor from 1964-72. "The IRS (Internal Revenue Service) has been auditing me for two years. In fact, they started two days after I got out of office. I've given them everything they've asked for."

"They can accuse me of a lot of things—good government and bad government—but they can't accuse me of not paying my taxes. That's more than I can say for Mr. Nixon and Mr. Rockefeller," Hearnes said.

Hearnes said he has been harassed politically ever since leaving office and said he felt the investigation could not be legitimate as long as it is handled out of the western district of Missouri, rather than the eastern district headquartered in St. Louis.

"You can't tell me if there's something wrong that the grand jury in Kansas City would handle it. That's the job of a grand jury in St. Louis," he said.

As an example of what he termed government harassment, Hearnes noted that he has already provided to the IRS several items sought in the s ubpoenas served to R.L. Saalwaechter, the Portageville bank president.

Hearnes, a Democrat, has accused the U.S. attorney's office, headed by a Republican, of singling him out because he has indicated he might run for the U.S. Senate in 1976. He has also challenged White to a public debate.

The subpoenas served to Saalwaechter sought a variety of records involving Hearnes, his wife and several campaign organizations. Judge Becker modified subpoenas relating to records from the estate of J.V. Conran, former president of the Portageville bank. The judge said the information was not relevant to the investigation.

The only witness at the hearing Friday afternoon in Kansas City was Edwin L. Reising, an IRS agent from St. Louis.

Reising testified that the materials sought in the subpoenas were relevant because they would help determine what funds involved were taxable and when the income became taxable. He said a civil investigation was begun into Hearnes's income in January 1973 and became a criminal investigation last October.

Reising testified the IRS was inquiring about three loans totaling $90,000 in 1970 and 1971 from the Bootheel Committee for Hearnes to the Democratic State Committee and a $9,000 loan from the Bootheel committee to Godfrey Padberg, a law partner of Hearnes.

The IRS agent said he was interested in the Padberg loan because he had evidence it was used to build a swimming pool at the ex-governor's home in Charleston.

Reising said the IRS was also interested in a $10,000 loan Nov. 5, 1971 from the Bootheel committee to Henri Hequembourg Jr., a nephew of Hearnes.

Highway hearings planned

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—The Missouri Highway Department has announced it will begin holding public hearings before making preliminary plans for highway improvements.

Robert N. Hunter, chief highway engineer, said Friday the additional hearings will "offer us an added way of doing very early in the highway planning process the kinds of things we've been doing for many years in a variety of ways."

He said the hearings will be held when an area for highway improvement is identified, but before the details of the improvement plans are drafted.

Key Democrat agreeable to cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford outlined his plan for a $15 billion income tax cut Friday to a key congressional Democrat who later said the proposal "encompasses much of what I support."

"We have the ingredients for an early package of tax relief for the American people," said Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, after a White House meeting with Ford.

While Ullman declined to spell out details of the Ford plan, administration sources said the President has decided to ask for a $15 billion cut in personal income taxes, which they said would average out to about $70 for every American.

Ullman, whose committee must initiate all tax legislation, indicated some misgivings about a reported proposal to distribute the tax cut to Americans through special tax rebate checks for 1974 taxes.

"We are not in agreement on application," the Oregon Democrat said of procedures to implement the tax cut. He added that "on net impact we are not that far apart."

Ullman said Ford's program is "wider in scope than I had anticipated." But he pledged cooperation with Ford in quickly considering the tax relief legislation.

It was not definitely known whether the administration plan would involve a uniform tax cut for Americans at all income levels or whether it would be graduated in some way.

However, administration sources have indicated that Ford is leaning toward an across-the-board cut, while Ullman has said he favors providing proportionately greater relief for low and middle-income taxpayers.

Officials cautioned that final details of the tax rebate proposal are yet to be worked out.

But the decision on a tax cut makes it virtually certain Americans will have a substantial tax break this year, since most congressional leaders already are on record in favor of such a move.

The purpose would be to put more money in the hands of consumers to encourage them to spend the nation out of the deepening recession.

Administration officials said the President has not decided exactly how the $15 billion tax cut would be distributed. But they said one proposal being considered by Ford is a 10 per cent reduction in 1974 individual income taxes, which would be refunded either in special rebate checks or through reductions in tax payments.

Under that proposal, a family owing $2,000 in taxes would be entitled to a $200 tax reduction, for example.

The President decided on the $15 billion figure after receiving a unanimous recommendation for such a step from his 16-member labor-management committee.

Ford to close 10 auto plants

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. said today it is closing f0 of its 14 U.S. car assembly plants and all but two of its nine truck plants next week in layoffs which will affect 85,175 workers.

Temporary layoffs will affect 52,525 worker at a total of 25 Ford plants, the firm said. Indefinite layoffs, including 2,925 which begin on Monday, have forced 32,650 hourly workers off the Ford payroll.

The firm employs about 175,000 blue-collar workers. Several thousand white collar workers, including engineers, executives and clerical employes, have also been laid off by the nation's No. 2 auto maker.

Search locates crash victims

THAYER, Mo. (AP) — Aerial searchers spotted the wrecked plane and ground parties Friday recovered the bodies of a pilot from Cabool, Mo., and his woman passenger.

The Missouri Highway Patrol identified them as Jimmie Lee Matherly, 50, and Suzanne Kjellberg, 33, also from Caboool.

The plane disappeared after taking off about 7 o'clock Thursday night from the Thayer airport on a flight to Cabool, about 60 miles northeast of Thayer in the south-central Missouri Ozarks.

Investigators reported there was a heavy fog and mist when the plane took off, and some points in the area reported three inches and more of rain during the night.

A search started after the plane was reported missing Friday morning. Four pilots from Willow Springs, Mo., Carl Hopkins, Nick Matherly, Bill Cobband and Joe Gilliam, flew over the area, picked up an automatic distress signal from the downed Cessna 182 and directed ground crews to it.

Because of soft ground and mud, emergency vehicles had difficulty reaching the wreckage in a wooded gully about four miles west of the Thayer airport.

Sheriff Joe Hawkins reported the plane apparently spunt into the ground.

A coroner's jury was sworn in at Thayer to view the bodies and sit at a later inquest.

The Howell County sheriff's office at West Plains said it got a report about 7:30 Thursday night that a low-flying plane apparently was in trouble southwest of town.

The pilot then was no more than three or four minutes from the West Plains airport but he apparently tried to return to Thayer, about 20 miles east of his position and just above the Arkansas line.

Lawyer draws jail, fines for evasion

ST. LOUIS — Raymond Klemp, 64, a Caruthersville attorney, was sentenced by U. S. District Judge John K. Regan on three counts of willfully failing to plainly file his income tax returns for years 1968, 1969 and 1970.

Klemp was sentenced on the first count to a three-month prison term and fined $1,000. On the second and third counts, he was fined $1,000 on each.

The maximum penalty on each count could have been one year in prison, $10,000 fine, or both.

Klemp was found guilty by a jury in Cape Girardeau on Nov. 25 on all counts of a three-count criminal information which charged him with willful failure to plainly file his return for those years, when he had gross income of $33,771 in 1968, $35,486 in 1969 and $30,269 in 1970.

In addition to the sentence imposed, Klemp is also liable for all taxes, penalties and interest.

The case was investigated by Internal Revenue Service agents and presented in court by Michael W. Reat, assistant to U.S. Attorney Donald Stohr.

State jobless rate hits high

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Unemployment in Missouri soared to the highest level in almost two decades last month, jumping to 6.2 per cent.

And state officials predicted Friday the rate of unemployed will climb to 6.8 per cent by late February.

Figures from the state Division, of Employment Security show that about 125,000 Missourians were out of work in December, representing a full percentage point increase over November's 5.2 per cent unemployment rate.

"You'd have to go to the late 50's to find a comparable unemployment situation," said Tom Righthouse, chief of research and analysis of the Employment Division.

About half of the unemployed persons are from the construction, wholesale and retail trade, and garment and automobile manufacturing industries, said Righthouse.

Righthouse said the division is projecting unemployment to be 6.5 per cent for January before rising to 6.8 per cent in late February.

"We're hoping it will back down a little in March and April," he said, noting the warmer weather should help the construction industry.

Despite the growing number of unemployed Missourians, the state still is faring better than the nation as a whole.

The federal government's most recent figures showed unemployment nationally standing at the seasonally adjusted 7.1 per cent rate.

But the raw rate, which Righthouse said is comparable to Missouri's calculations, stood at 6.7 per cent.

"So we're still running one half to one per cent below the national unemployment level," Righthouse said.

Nonetheless, in a speech delivered Friday by Gov. Christopher S. Bond in Crestwood, he said "Assuring adequate job opportunities for Missourians is our highest priority in state government. I am concerned especially about the St. Louis area where there are some 45,000 persons unemployed."

In his annual message Wednesday, Bond urged the Missouri General Assembly to increase benefits to the unemployed from the present maximum of $67 a week to $90 a week.

The governor also noted in his speech Friday that "we will be working with local governments to provide 1,200 temporary public service employment jobs, funded by the federal government, which can provide needed community facilities as well as employment for those out of work."

In addition, various bills increasing workmen's compensation benefits in light of the economy will be considered by the legislature this session.

With the increased number of unemployed, the Employment Security Division's payments to persons out of jobs wre up 98.7 per cent from a year ago in December to $11.75 million.

The average weekly benefit check issued last month also jumped to an all-time high of $54.34.

Weather-related accidents kill 3

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Snow spread into northwestern and southwestern Missouri late Friday, but heavy rain took its toll in the southcentral part of the state early in the day.

Three persons died in weather-related accidents during thunderstorms that started the previous night and dumped up to 4 inches of rain in the Willow Springs and St. Charles areas.

Two persons who flew out of the Thayer airport in a heavy thunderstorm Thursday night were found in the wreckage of their plane Friday afternoon a few miles away. An 18-year-old St. Clair man was killed Fridaywhen his car skidded out of control after hitting a puddle of water on Missouri 13 and crashed into a utility pole.

A woman from Brixey was more fortunate.

Her car was washed off a low-water bridge on a gravel road near Gainesville early Friday by flash flood waters from Spring Creek. She was trapped in the car for more than four hours and was thought by rescuers to be dead.

She was being treated late Fridy at a hospital in Mansfield, where she was reported to be in satisfactory condition.

"The car was completely submerged for ahile, but there must have been an air pocket so she could breathe. She was in it for four hours. The water was icy cold."

Pierce said Mrs. Otterbacker's husband, John, managed to get out of the car, swim to shore and notify authorities, but then was prevented from getting back to the car because of the swift current and deep water. The car was about 200 feet from shore.

The sheriff said people at the scene told him the woman was dead but he heard cries from the car.

"I tied a rope around my waist and waded out there, but the doors wouldn't open. We finally had to drag the car out to get the woman," he said.

High water in Potter Creek east of Cabool washed out a section of track and sent two engines of a Frisco Railway freight train plunging into the water Friday morning.

Thirty-seven freight cars — 18 of them loaded with carpets, clothing, cigarettes, fertilizer, canned goods and bther items — also derailed, but 58 other cars remained on the tracks.

Tom McKee, 55, of Springfield, the engineer of the train, and Al Cole of Springfield, a fireman, were stranded on the engine in the middle of Potter Creek for a couple hours. Rescuers were thwarted from reaching them because of the high water.

Both men were later taken to a hospital for treatment of bruises and lacerations.

One witness said the banks of the creek looked like a trash dump, with a couple dozen people walking through the mud with armloads of spilled merchandise.

"We won't be able to salvage very much of the merchandise," said a railroad spokesman.

The train was en route from Memphis to Kansas City. A Frisco spokesman said it would probably be Sunday before the tracks could be repaired.

Youth stabbed near East Prairie school

EAST PRAIRIE — Thomas Caldwell, 14, of East Prairie was stabbed in the stomach by another 14-year-old East Prairie youth about 12:25 p.m. Friday near the junior high school.

The injured youth was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital at Sikeston, where he was treated and released, according to police officer Jim Baker.

Two or three other boys reportedly were involved in the incident and, prior to the stabbing, had threatened to whip the boy who stabbed Caldwell.

The weapon, believed to be a pocket knife, has not been found.

The youth accused of the stabbing was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Barber on the job 52 years and still going

On January 10, 1923, Jim Hackett returned home from a freight ride to Jonesboro, Ark., with his apprentice license to become a barber in Thayer, Mo. His work schedule ran before and after school on weekdays and all day on Saturdays because Hackett was only 17 and a high school junior at the time.

The three year apprenticeship ended and Hackett moved on to West Plains. He says that when he started in the trade, barbers were still using hand clippers and, when the shop he worked in finally got electric ones, there were only two pairs that were passed between the four barbers.

Another memory of the old shops is one of a whole wall lined with the customer's personal shaving cups.

Hackett also said that when he first began barbering, there were no beauty shops and all the women came to the barber shop to have their hair "bobbed" in the latest fashion.

Hackett's barbering career is filled with a lot of memories like that. That comes from 52 years at the same job.

Jewelry items taken

Burglars stole several pieces of jewelry from the Lillas Heacox home, 925 Lake St., sometime between Nov. 11 and Jan. 1, police reported Friday night.

Taken were two diamond rings, two watches, three pairs of earrings and a transistor radio.

Police said entry was apparently gained through a bedroom window, where a hole had been cut in a window screen near the lock.

No value was given on the missing items.

Rural home ransacked

NEW MADRID — Roger Patterson, Route One, reported to the New Madrid County sheriff's department at 7:30 p.m Friday that his house, located two miles west of town on Route U, had been entered between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Friday.

He said three jewelry boxes had been searched and a bedroom closet and drawers ransacked.

Two antique knicknacks had been taken off a shelf and a silver dollar was missing.

A screwdriver was used to open a back door, according to the investigation report.

Hearnes probe reported to involve tax evasion

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A federal grand jury is investigating the personal finances of former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and his wife and possible income tax violations, an assistant U.S. attorney said during a hearing Friday.

Paul Anthony White, who has spearheaded a two-year investigation into possible corruption during the Hearnes Administration, made the disclosure at a hearing before Judge William H. Becker of U.S. District Court.

He said the grand jury's investigation includes possible income tax evasion and making false statements on a federal tax return, as well as extortion under the color of official right and mail fraud.

The hearing was on a motion to quash subpoenas served on the president of the Farmers Bank of Portageville for records relating to the ex-governor's personal finances. Judge Becker refused to quash the subpoenas but modified one of them.

Hearnes said at his home in Charleston Friday that the investigation is politically motivated and designed to help White make a name for himself.

"I've paid all the taxes I owe," said Hearnes, who served as governor from 1964-72. "The IRS (Internal Revenue Service) has been auditing me for two years. In fact, they started two days after I got out of office. I've given them everything they've asked for."

"They can accuse me of a lot of things—good government and bad government—but they can't accuse me of not paying my taxes. That's more than I can say for Mr. Nixon and Mr. Rockefeller," Hearnes said.

Hearnes said he has been harassed politically ever since leaving office and said he felt the investigation could not be legitimate as long as it is handled out of the western district of Missouri, rather than the eastern district headquartered in St. Louis.

"You can't tell me if there's something wrong that the grand jury in Kansas City would handle it. That's the job of a grand jury in St. Louis," he said.

As an example of what he termed government harassment, Hearnes noted that he has already provided to the IRS several items sought in the s ubpoenas served to R.L. Saalwaechter, the Portageville bank president.

Hearnes, a Democrat, has accused the U.S. attorney's office, headed by a Republican, of singling him out because he has indicated he might run for the U.S. Senate in 1976. He has also challenged White to a public debate.

The subpoenas served to Saalwaechter sought a variety of records involving Hearnes, his wife and several campaign organizations. Judge Becker modified subpoenas relating to records from the estate of J.V. Conran, former president of the Portageville bank. The judge said the information was not relevant to the investigation.

The only witness at the hearing Friday afternoon in Kansas City was Edwin L. Reising, an IRS agent from St. Louis.

Reising testified that the materials sought in the subpoenas were relevant because they would help determine what funds involved were taxable and when the income became taxable. He said a civil investigation was begun into Hearnes's income in January 1973 and became a criminal investigation last October.

Reising testified the IRS was inquiring about three loans totaling $90,000 in 1970 and 1971 from the Bootheel Committee for Hearnes to the Democratic State Committee and a $9,000 loan from the Bootheel committee to Godfrey Padberg, a law partner of Hearnes.

The IRS agent said he was interested in the Padberg loan because he had evidence it was used to build a swimming pool at the ex-governor's home in Charleston.

Reising said the IRS was also interested in a $10,000 loan Nov. 5, 1971 from the Bootheel committee to Henri Hequembourg Jr., a nephew of Hearnes.

Highway hearings planned

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—The Missouri Highway Department has announced it will begin holding public hearings before making preliminary plans for highway improvements.

Robert N. Hunter, chief highway engineer, said Friday the additional hearings will "offer us an added way of doing very early in the highway planning process the kinds of things we've been doing for many years in a variety of ways."

He said the hearings will be held when an area for highway improvement is identified, but before the details of the improvement plans are drafted.

Key Democrat agreeable to cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford outlined his plan for a $15 billion income tax cut Friday to a key congressional Democrat who later said the proposal "encompasses much of what I support."

"We have the ingredients for an early package of tax relief for the American people," said Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, after a White House meeting with Ford.

While Ullman declined to spell out details of the Ford plan, administration sources said the President has decided to ask for a $15 billion cut in personal income taxes, which they said would average out to about $70 for every American.

Ullman, whose committee must initiate all tax legislation, indicated some misgivings about a reported proposal to distribute the tax cut to Americans through special tax rebate checks for 1974 taxes.

"We are not in agreement on application," the Oregon Democrat said of procedures to implement the tax cut. He added that "on net impact we are not that far apart."

Ullman said Ford's program is "wider in scope than I had anticipated." But he pledged cooperation with Ford in quickly considering the tax relief legislation.

It was not definitely known whether the administration plan would involve a uniform tax cut for Americans at all income levels or whether it would be graduated in some way.

However, administration sources have indicated that Ford is leaning toward an across-the-board cut, while Ullman has said he favors providing proportionately greater relief for low and middle-income taxpayers.

Officials cautioned that final details of the tax rebate proposal are yet to be worked out.

But the decision on a tax cut makes it virtually certain Americans will have a substantial tax break this year, since most congressional leaders already are on record in favor of such a move.

The purpose would be to put more money in the hands of consumers to encourage them to spend the nation out of the deepening recession.

Administration officials said the President has not decided exactly how the $15 billion tax cut would be distributed. But they said one proposal being considered by Ford is a 10 per cent reduction in 1974 individual income taxes, which would be refunded either in special rebate checks or through reductions in tax payments.

Under that proposal, a family owing $2,000 in taxes would be entitled to a $200 tax reduction, for example.

The President decided on the $15 billion figure after receiving a unanimous recommendation for such a step from his 16-member labor-management committee.

Ford to close 10 auto plants

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. said today it is closing f0 of its 14 U.S. car assembly plants and all but two of its nine truck plants next week in layoffs which will affect 85,175 workers.

Temporary layoffs will affect 52,525 worker at a total of 25 Ford plants, the firm said. Indefinite layoffs, including 2,925 which begin on Monday, have forced 32,650 hourly workers off the Ford payroll.

The firm employs about 175,000 blue-collar workers. Several thousand white collar workers, including engineers, executives and clerical employes, have also been laid off by the nation's No. 2 auto maker.

JAMES ANGLETON:
A LOSS TO THE COUNTRY

The furor over alleged CIA domestic spying has produced its first sacrificial victim. He is James Angleton, head of the agency's counter-intelligence division and a veteran of 31 years in the intelligence field.

Mr. Angleton has denied that he , personally, had anything to do with any domestic surveillance activities. Nevertheless, he resigned for the "interests of the agency," because he had been charged by the New York Times as being the overseer of a "massive, illegal" intelligence operation against anti-war dissidents and others.

We don't know Mr. Angleton personally and, like most Americans, we don't yet know the full extent of the truth or falsity of the charges against the CIA. But from what we do know of Mr. Angleton's background, and from his comments, we suspect that his resignation will be a heavy blow to the real interests and security of this nation.

Angleton is one of a fast vanishing breed: a dedicated professional who deals with the real world instead of the hopeful fantasies dished up by diplomats and presidents. His experience with the Soviet's own intelligence organization — the KGB — has precluded any illusions. Reflecting on his long career, James Angleton has had a few things to say that, to us, are sobering.

"When we went into the (intelligence) business we thought of the country first," he was quoted by a friend. "But things have changed now. People want their mortgages earlier and personal security seems more important than service to the country." He told an acquaintance that his CIA workwas a "31-year association in the cause of national security, which people no longer consider important."

In a telephone conversation with the Washington Post, Angleton referred to what he called a "masochistic" tendency in U.S. society, and predicted that the countries under the influence of the Soviet Union would become more powerful than the United States over the next five years. He said that in the next four or five years "there will be a change of power in which we will back down and surrender" to the Soviets. He also commented that "a western intelligence service has no hope of competing with police states. The opposition has 27 different services in the Soviet bloc hammering against us."

Many Americans, aken in by the Soviet strategem of "detente," will r.o doubt look upon these remarks as the ranting of an obsolete "cold warrior." To them, probably, Mr. Angleton's departure will be regarded as good riddance. To us, his loss is a national tragedy.

BURIED IN SOUR MASH

As a special promotion, Jack Daniels Distillery confers the title of "Tennessee Squire" on important personages. It is merely an honorary salute, somewhat akin to the Kentucky Colonels.

A "member" receives a letter and an identification card plus an impressive-looking "deed" to one square foot of land at the distillery.

When Frank Sinatra received his "Squiredom", he somehow got the impression he had been deeded a Tennessee acre instead of one square foot. He had his lawyer inquire about the property. WhenWinstonSmith, the company's president, heard about it he said, "Let's give him an acre."

They did and Sinatra is now an absentee owner.

Another squire wrote to ask if he could be buried on his plot of land. "Yes", was the reply, "if you don't mind being buried vertically."

THE SEARCH FOR 12 BLANK MINDS

It has to be done in the interest of justice, of coursc. Even so, there is something contradictory about the hours and days consumed at the beginning of the Watergate coverup trial in Washington in the endeavor to find 12 men and women, and alternates, who retained an "open mind" about Watergate.

On the one hand, Americans are encouraged to learn what is going on in their communities and in their nation. The large percentage of people who answer "don't know" in every opinion poll is cited as a symptom of our lack of caring, our noninvolvement, or of the failure of the media and of leaders to inform the public.

On the other hand, when they are called to serve on juries, people are supposed to have perfectly pristine minds, untainted by prior knowledge or opinion.

Actually, anyone who still has an "open mind" about Watergate — meaning either that he has never heard of the scandal or is totally unaware of the many damaging stories that have been published about those involved — wouldhave to be so wanting in the mental department that his fitness as a juror would be suspect on that ground alone.

We seem to have gotten the idea in this country that a fair trial means that only people possessing the naivete of newly arrived Martians are qualified to sit on juries.

What a fair trial really means is that, first, every defendant in a court of law is to be considered innocent until proven guilty and that he has certain basic rights — the right to hear the evidence against him, to confront his accusers, etc. — that must be protected. And second, that those who judge him will honesty put aside whatever prejudices or preconceptions they may have and will maketheir decision solely on the basis of the evidence presented in court.

This does not call for blank minds. Just fair ones.

THE UNCHARITABLE EFFECTS ON INFLATION

Inflation is having some curious effects besides those not so-curious effects we all know about.

For example, Americans are not donating as much old clothing, furniture and whatnot to charities as they used to. They're selling it instead, at g arage sales and flea markets.

Goodwill Industries reports that its familiar collection boxes are emptier these days. Even worse, many of them are being pilfered. The Salvation Army also reports a decline in donations.

"Garage sales used to be held when people were housecleaning or moving," says Claude Sheridan of Detroit's Goodwill Industries, as quoted by the Christian Science Monitor. "Now, they're getting to be big business."

To try to counter this trend, organizations which depend upon voluntary contributions are stressing the tax-deductible advantages, says the Monitor.

"If people knew that a tax break from a contribution may be more than the profits at a sale, perhaps they would think twice about holding the sale," suggests Matthew Warren, national public relations director for Goodwill.

Inflation is not only forcing up the cost of living but the cost of dying as well.

According to Francis E. Vanderbur, president of a mortuary company in Denver, the business is being hit by the rising cost of personnel, caskets, urns, burial vaults and even gasoline used in hearsses. A funeral that cost $695 a few years ago is now $1,200.

The best way people can beat inflation at the funeral home, says Vanderbur, is to buy asmuch as possible in advance — casket, headstone, tomb, etc. A sort of pay-now, die-later plan.

In Miami, however, one funeral home is offering a cash-and-carry cremation service for a bargain $137.50. The fee covers the cost of everything. You carry home the ashes in a cardboard container.

Competitors say it's the beginning of a price war reflecting a declining birth rate that is taking the undertaking business with it. "The next thing you know they'll be giving away a turkey with each cremation," complains one mortician.

Well, in these inflationary times, every little bit helps.

BUSINESS FAILURES EXPECTED TO RISE

A sharp rise in business bankruptcies in the next six months is predicted by the National Association of Credit Managers.

A recent sruvey of credit executives by NACM sees a rise in the number of companies filing for bankruptcy, according to 72 per cent of the respondents, while 62 per cent expect an increase in the number of accounts placed in the hands of collection agencies.

These forecasts are based on conditions imposed by current high interest rates and slow payments by customers. Business credit executives say these are their two major concerns today. As a result, 88 per cent foresee more stringent credit policies in the next six months.

Other problem areas identified n the survey are supply roblems, inadequate cash flow, business failures, excess inventories, falling sales and inadequately-trained personnel.

A TEST OF RESPECT

A test of public confidence in certain professions, trades, business and government as expressed in respect for their leadership brings out a surprising fact. According to a Harris Poll, public respect for U.S. leadership has dropped "drastrically" in the last five years. The poll indicates that "a majority of Americans is currently willing to express a 'great deal of confidence' in only one profession -- medicine -- on a list covering 16 different types of activity." Ranking lowest in public respect are leaders in advertising, trade unions and the mass media. Congress fell from 42 percent in 1966 to 19 percent in 1971 in the "great deal of confidence" category, the Executive Branch from 41 percent to 23 percent, and the Supreme Court from 31 percent to 23 percent. Educators dropped from 61 percent to 37 percent during the period.

It seems that in spite of all political efforts to create mistrust of the nation's doctors, the people still look to their physician as a man to be respected. In today's world of cynnicism and distrust, this is nedeed a high tribute to the integrity of a profession that has been denigrated by politicians for many years.

BRINK OF DISASTER

New U.S. Atomic Energy Commission regulations to implement the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 could result in an "Inadequate power supply in many areas of the country," according to the president of the Edison Electric Institute. The Institute is the principal trade association of electric power companies in the United States. A study, cited by the EEI official, reveals that, "... nuclear power plants that are completed or are scheduled for completion within the next few years . . . may be delayed one or even two years ..." Th official warns that, "Delay in the installation of needed nuclear generating capacity can result in possible disruption of the nation's economy, in addition to serious inconvenience and expense to electric power consumers."

The electric industry has turned to nuclear power as a safe, reliable, economical and environmentally acceptable way to meet future electric power need of the nation. Currently, 61 nuclear power units are scheduled to go into operation between now and 1975. If these plants are delayed in commencing operations, the utility industry spokesman says there will be "serious electric power supply problems in the Northeast, Middle Atlantic, Southeast, Midwest, North Central, South Central, and Pacific Northwest regions of the country."

Th momentum of environmental protectionism has carried the country to the brink of disaster. Thre is no other interpretation to place upon the facts revealed by the Edison Electric Institute and its spokesman.

A SENSITIVE CIA MAN
By Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON--Although the CIA is supposed to be secret, everybody in Washington knows at least one person who works for it. My CIA connection is Rumplemeyer, who has been in and out of the cold for 25 years.

"Nobody understands us," Rumplemeyer told me the other day as we changed taxis for the third time to make sure no one was following us.

"Why do you say that?" I asked.

"Well, take all the hoopla about the CIA that is going on now. They are accusing us of every crime under the sun."

"Are the charges true or not?"

"I can't say," he replied.

"Let me get this straight, Rumplemeyer. Accusations have been made against 'the company' which could or could not be true and, although you say no one understands you, you can't respond to them."

"That's correct. If we answered the allegations we might compromise the illegal actions we had to take in order to do the job we're supposed to do."

"Well, how can we understand you if we don't know what you're doing?"

"Why can't you take us on faith?" he wanted to know.

"I'd like to, Rumplemeyer. Everyone would like to. But if we're not careful you people could turn out to be another KGB. You certainly wouldn't want a KGB in this country would you?"

"I'm not allowed to answer that," Rumplemeyer said.

"The problem as I see it," I said, "is that the American people want a strong intelligence agency, but not one that could turn against us."

"You think that way because you don't know us," Rumplemeyer said. "If you knew what we were doing you wouldn't say that."

"Well, what are you doing?" I asked.

"I can't tell you," Rumplemeyer said. "Let's get another taxi."

"We settled in our fourth cab. "Nobody appreciates anything we do," he said sadly. "We're the only ones in this town who can't talk about our work. Do you think it's fun to go to a party and hear everyone bragging about his profession? The guy next door to me is a lawyer. When he wins a case he tells everyone on the block. Down the street is a man who works for the Defense Department. Every time he gives a billion dollars away he is congratulated. But if I overthrow a government, I have to keep my mouth shut. I can't even go to a cocktail party and say, 'I had lunch with a Polish defector today.' It gets to you after a while."

"Of course it does," I said sympathetically. "But don't forget, you chose to work for the company. Surely you knew what you were getting into when you joined up."

"Everybody needs appreciation," he said as tears came into his eyes. "We all like to hear people say, 'Well done.'"

"But how can I tell you 'Well done' when I have no idea what you did? Now if you said you were involved in the Chile operation, I could at least pat you on the back."

"I didn't say I was involved in the Chile operation," he said quickly.

"Then how can I give you any credit for it?"

"I don't want credit for Chile."

"Well, what do you want credit for?"

"I can't tell you. Can't you just say 'Well done' without knowing what I did? Is that asking too much?"

"All right, Rumplemeyer. Well done."

"What for?" he asked nervously.

"I have no idea."

"How did you know I was involved with that?" he said with alarm.

"I didn't. I just guessed it."

Inside Labor

Victor Riesel

Manicured Mafia in 1975: Respected young prosecutor says flatly Mafia does $50 billion annual business in U.S.

NEW YORK An old Mafia don, whom Mike Wallace and I interviewed on television some years ago, blandly and quietly took my insults during the questioning. At one point I spat out something like, "The combine's shooting spree is as stupid as it's sadistic." His reply was "usta." I finally translated this as "used to be."

He was part of the Carlo Gambino family -- though he did die a natural death. Big man in labor here for a while. And it did take several years and a long broadcast discussion with the 34-year-old new regional Justice Department anti-organized crime strike force chief, Bill Aronwald, to realize how right the old don was.

There's lots of ugly muscle around. Some shooting. And, according to the federals, the last of the Gallo crowd (a weakening crew inside the so-called Colombo family) had better worry about extinction by lead poisoning in 1975.

But the Mafia, at least in the U.S., now is more than the stuff of which Godfather movies are made. The dons are sick, dying, just going into prison, or just coming out to be hit by new indictments. The FBI is concentrating on "quality investigation." Clarence Kelley's agents and desk specialists are going after the leading mob figures to "knock off the big men. Already they are confused and ineffective."

Don of dons Carlo Gambino is not well these days -- a malaise which wasn't helped by the subpoena just served on him. Others are like shadows in a dark room.

Coverage of the Mafia now must be different. Cetainly, the old names can be rolled out. But they're just confusing to the laymen - -like the three cousins who are Big Paul, Small Paul and Little Paul all with the same last name.

It's best simply to report that the biggest combine now is the Genovese group -- which actually is a holding company with five, maybe six, mini-families each controlled by powerful captains. And chairman of the board, allegedly, is the ailing 70-year-old Frank (Funzi) Tieri, who is not too well and is under federal indictment on charges of violating the Extortionate Credit Transactions Statute.

They're the most powerful "organization" in the East -- therefore in the nation. But that's not the top of th story.

As Bill Aronwald, whose coordinated anti-crime task force is made up of specialists ranging from the New York Police Departrment to the Securities and Exchange Commission, says, the Mafia is in big business. The younger men are literati and have seeped deeply into legitimate industries -- using fabulous sums of illegitimate money (and some muscle) to take over.

Don't look to Mulberry Street -- but to Madison Avenue, Park Avenue and Wall Street.

In all, the money they handle across the nation from one source or another comes to $50 billion (repeat billion) a year. I would not believe it if Bill Aronwald had not said it. He has sent some of the toughest Mafiosi to prison. He has a fantastic flow of intelligence from every conceivable investigative agency.

"This is a good ball park figure," says Aronwald. Actually, could be it's too low."

Aronwald views the Godfather films as a reporter does the thunder and blitzen newspaper city room movies. This almost unbelievable statistic includes the hug sums of money stolen from banks and brokerage houses. Little more than a year ago, for example, $15.3 million in U.S. Treasury bills disappeared from the Chase Manhattan Bank here. And more recently, $4.3 million disappeared from a Chicago security fault. These are but two of thousands of such thefts.

The money is washed and invested. So it's a new Mafia. Smooth. Not only deep in industry and some unions, but in powerful political machines. Always, sometimes subtly, sometimes overtly disdainful, the mob uses front men constantly accepted in the best of circles. Including Washington.

All of this is leading the Mafia's younger generation -- as it will be noticed in 1975 -- out of the big "central cities" and even their suburbs. The "muscled money" is heading South, West and Southwest. They're going across the Mississippi. They'll find old friends just over the river in Iowa. They're moving into Colorado, Arizona and Texas more deeply than ever, says one source who rarely has been wrong on the Mafia. There's more for them in Florida. And Georgia is open territory.

It isn't only the grit of the big cities which disturbs them with all that street crime and racial and ethnic competition. They're going where the money is' where the big ball teams are becoming the Yankees and Dodgers of old; where new developments spring up daily; where there's money in still unpurchased real estate; where there's new growth and investment money is needed.

"It's the whole gambit," says this source. "We follow them. For the real bosses, there's the money. They don't want to get knocked off by the FBI or the strike forces or muddied by the brainless muscle in loan sharking and fists for hire. You might say the Mafia, in a way, is going public."

Wonder what Godfather III will be like?

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: The Torturers

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON --We have seen enough of the seamy side of life to harden us to shock. But the letters that are smuggled to us from torture victims always leaves us shaken.

Priests who have been permitted inside the prisons of Brazil have brought us, at great personal risk, evidence of the inhumanity of the Brazilian military regime.

Friends and relatives have smuggled out letters from Cuban political prisoners, describing the horrors of Fidel Castro's concentration camps. We have spoken to an American girl, a gentle art teacher, who had been tortured by the Chilean military junta.

The latest letters have been delivered to us by friends of Olga Talamante, a 25-year-old U.S. citizen, who has been beaten and tortured with electric shock at a federal police station in the provincial town of Azui, Argentina. Her letters to her farm worker-parents and former school friends in California are graphic.

"We spent four days and four nights which were pure hell," she related. "They beat the hell out of us . ... There was no difference between day and night, as our heads were covered with coarse cloth bags and we weren't allowed to sleep.

"We were constantly interrogated and, of course, 'persuaded' with a special electric gadget to talk. The combination of physical punishment and psychological stress is something they're practiced for a long time, because they are really good at it.

"But not good enough!" she wrote in an aside from her cell.

"It's impossible to describe everything we went through, but it is very real. To think," she wrote, "that many other people have gone through it (torture) and have even died of it gives one a different dimension on one's own situation."

Talamante, who is in a cell with five women, indicated they are now being treated well and "have everything we need except dear freedom."

In the writing style of Anne Frank, whose family hid out from the Germans in Amsterdam during World War II, Talamante observed: "Ironically enough, there is a bird's nest on the jail's roof. I asked myself why that free dove chose a jail's roof to build its home. It's as if it wants to remind us that freedom still exists."

The American girl was arrested with a dozen Argentines just a few days after a state of siege was declared in Argentina. Police reports charge that the arrest site contained arms and subversive materials, which could bring a minimum three years' prison sentence under the sweeping new laws.

A former honor student at the University of California in Santa Cruz, Talamante journeyed to Argentina in August 1973 with money earned picking garlic. She taught English in Azui and planned to return to the United States on November 24 in time for Thanksgiving.

A friend, Rebecca Estrada, recalls that Talamante was particularly interested in political corruption in CIA-supported military regimes even though "she realized she was getting into heavy stuff."

An Argentine embassy spokesman told our reporters, Rozanne Weissman: "This case cannot be compared to those in Chile because we don't torture people in Argentina" and "we still have our legal procedures in force even during our state of siege."

Even more depressing are letters from Antonio Cuesta Valle, blind and maimed, who, nevertheless, is held by Fidel Castro in a brutal Cuban prison. Cuesta asked his friends to bring his story to us, although he expects retaliation when it is printed.

He led a commando raid on Cuba in 1966. His small boat was intercepted by patrol boats and four of his associates were killed in a fierce exchange of gunfire. Cuesta urged the only other survivor, Engenio Aaldivar, that they cheat the firing squad and commit suicide.

They exploded a hand grenade which blew off one of Cuesta's arms, destroyed his eyesight and riddled his body with shrapnel. Yet he miraculously survived. His companion lost the use of one leg.

In the hospital, they received only minimum medical care and scarcely enough food to stay alive. The hospital was infested with rats, bedbugs and cockroaches. One night a rat bit the blind Cuesta on the face. A prisoner-nurse treated the bites with daubs of mercurochrome.

Now in a special gallery for political prisoners, Cuesta writes of beatings and brutality by the guards, and of the constant "requisas" or searches. The prisoners are stripped naked and chased into the patio by guards who strike them with clubs.

Cuesta also must recruit a fellow prisoner to dress and shave him. As quickly as he becomes dependent upon someone, the guards sadistically move the prisoner and leave Cuesta on his own again.

Yet this blind man with one arm is abled to write Spanish poetry and conduct clandestine church services in the prison. He knows the guards will punish him when the news of this is published, but he wants the world to know.

"I am sure that I will never leave this prison alive," he writes, "and there is nothing anyone can do about it."

JAMES ANGLETON: A LOSS TO THE COUNTRY

The furor over alleged CIA domestic spying has produced its first sacrificial victim. He is James Angleton, head of the agency's counter-intelligence division and a veteran of 31 years in the intelligence field.

Mr. Angleton has denied that he , personally, had anything to do with any domestic surveillance activities. Nevertheless, he resigned for the "interests of the agency," because he had been charged by the New York Times as being the overseer of a "massive, illegal" intelligence operation against anti-war dissidents and others.

We don't know Mr. Angleton personally and, like most Americans, we don't yet know the full extent of the truth or falsity of the charges against the CIA. But from what we do know of Mr. Angleton's background, and from his comments, we suspect that his resignation will be a heavy blow to the real interests and security of this nation.

Angleton is one of a fast vanishing breed: a dedicated professional who deals with the real world instead of the hopeful fantasies dished up by diplomats and presidents. His experience with the Soviet's own intelligence organization — the KGB — has precluded any illusions. Reflecting on his long career, James Angleton has had a few things to say that, to us, are sobering.

"When we went into the (intelligence) business we thought of the country first," he was quoted by a friend. "But things have changed now. People want their mortgages earlier and personal security seems more important than service to the country." He told an acquaintance that his CIA workwas a "31-year association in the cause of national security, which people no longer consider important."

In a telephone conversation with the Washington Post, Angleton referred to what he called a "masochistic" tendency in U.S. society, and predicted that the countries under the influence of the Soviet Union would become more powerful than the United States over the next five years. He said that in the next four or five years "there will be a change of power in which we will back down and surrender" to the Soviets. He also commented that "a western intelligence service has no hope of competing with police states. The opposition has 27 different services in the Soviet bloc hammering against us."

Many Americans, aken in by the Soviet strategem of "detente," will ro doubt look upon these remarks as the ranting of an obsolete "cold warrior." To them, probably, Mr. Angleton's departure will be regarded as good riddance. To us, his loss is a national tragedy.

BURIED IN SOUR MASH

As a special promotion, Jack Daniels Distillery confers the title of "Tennessee Squire" on important personages. It is merely an honorary salute, somewhat akin to the Kentucky Colonels.

A "member" receives a letter and an identification card plus an impressive-looking "deed" to one square foot of land at the distillery.

When Frank Sinatra received his "Squiredom", he somehow got the impression he had been deeded a Tennessee acre instead of one square foot. He had his lawyer inquire about the property. WhenWinstonSmith, the company's president, heard about it he said, "Let's give him an acre."

They did and Sinatra is now an absentee owner.

Another squire wrote to ask if he could be buried on his plot of land. "Yes", was the reply, "if you don't mind being buried vertically."

THE SEARCH FOR 12 BLANK MINDS

It has to be done in the interest of justice, of course. Even so, there is something contradictory about the hours and days consumed at the beginning of the Watergate coverup trial in Washington in the endeavor to find 12 men and women, and alternates, who retained an "open mind" about Watergate.

On the one hand, Americans are encouraged to learn what is going on in their communities and in their nation. The large percentage of people who answer "don't know" in every opinion poll is cited as a symptom of our lack of caring, our noninvolvement, or of the failure of the media and of leaders to inform the public.

On the other hand, when they are called to serve on juries, people are supposed to have perfectly pristine minds, untainted by prior knowledge or opinion.

Actually, anyone who still has an "open mind" about Watergate — meaning either that he has never heard of the scandal or is totally unaware of the many damaging stories that have been published about those involved — wouldhave to be so wanting in the mental department that his fitness as a juror would be suspect on that ground alone.

We seem to have gotten the idea in this country that a fair trial means that only people possessing the naivete of newly arrived Martians are qualified to sit on juries.

What a fair trial really means is that, first, every defendant in a court of law is to be considered innocent until proven guilty and that he has certain basic rights — the right to hear the evidence against him, to confront his accusers, etc. — that must be protected. And second, that those who judge him will honesty put aside whatever prejudices or preconceptions they may have and will maketheir decision solely on the basis of the evidence presented in court.

This does not call for blank minds. Just fair ones.

THE UNCHARITABLE EFFECTS ON INFLATION

Inflation is having some curious effects besides those not socurious effects we all know about.

For example, Americans are not donating as much old clothing, furniture and whatnot to charities as they used to. They're selling it instead, at g arage sales and flea markets.

Goodwill Industries reports that its familiar collection boxes are emptier these days. Even worse, many of them are being pilfered. The Salvation Army also reports a decline in donations.

"Garage sales used to be held when people were housecleaning or moving," says Claude Sheridan of Detroit's Goodwill Industries, as quoted by the Christian Science Monitor. "Now, they're getting to be big business."

To try to counter this trend, organizations which depend upon voluntary contributions are stressing the tax-deductible advantages, says the Monitor.

"If people knew that a tax break from a contribution may be more than the profits at a sale, perhaps they would think twice about holding the sale," suggests Matthew Warren, national public relations director for Goodwill.

Inflation is not only forcing up the cost of living but the cost of dying as well.

According to Francis E. Vanderbur, president of a mortuary company in Denver, the business is being hit by the rising cost of personnel, caskets, urns, burial vaults and even gasoline used in hearsses. A funeral that cost $695 a few years ago is now $1,200.

The best way people can beat inflation at the funeral home, says Vanderbur, is to buy asmuch as possible in advance — casket, headstone, tomb, etc. A sort of pay-now, die-later plan.

In Miami, however, one funeral home is offering a cash-and-carry cremation service for a bargain $137.50. The fee covers the cost of everything. You carry home the ashes in a cardboard container.

Competitors say it's the beginning of a price war reflecting a declining birth rate that is taking the undertaking business with it. "The next thing you know they'll be giving away a turkey with each cremation," complains one mortician.

Well, in these inflationary times, every little bit helps.

BUSINESS FAILURES EXPECTED TO RISE

A sharp rise in business bankruptcies in the next six months is predicted by the National Association of Credit Managers.

A recent sruvey of credit executives by NACM sees a rise in the number of companies filing for bankruptcy, according to 72 per cent of the respondents, while 62 per cent expect an increase in the number of accounts placed in the hands of collection agencies.

These forecasts are based on conditions imposed by current high interest rates and slow payments by customers. Business credit executives say these are their two major concerns today. As a result, 88 per cent foresee more stringent credit policies in the next six months.

Other problem areas identified n the survey are supply roblems, inadequate cash flow, business failures, excess inventories, falling sales and inadequately-trained personnel.

A TEST OF RESPECT

A test of public confidence in certain professions, trades, business and government as expressed in respect for their leadership brings out a surprising fact. According to a Harris Poll, public respect for U.S. leadership has dropped "drastrically" in the last five years. The poll indicates that "a majority of Americans is currently willing to express a 'great deal of confidence' in only one profession -- medicine -- on a list covering 16 different types of activity." Ranking lowest in public respect are leaders in advertising, trade unions and the mass media. Congress fell from 42 percent in 1966 to 19 percent in 1971 in the "great deal of confidence" category, the Executive Branch from 41 percent to 23 percent, and the Supreme Court from 31 percent to 23 percent. Educators dropped from 61 percent to 37 percent during the period.

It seems that in spite of all political efforts to create mistrust of the nation's doctors, the people still look to their physician as a man to be respected. In today's world of cynnicism and distrust, this is nedeed a high tribute to the integrity of a profession that has been denigrated by politicians for many years.

BRINK OF DISASTER

New U.S. Atomic Energy Commission regulations to implement the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 could result in an "Inadequate power supply in many areas of the country," according to the president of the Edison Electric Institute. The Institute is the principal trade association of electric power companies in the United States. A study, cited by the EEI official, reveals that, "... nuclear power plants that are completed or are scheduled for completion within the next few years . . . may be delayed one or even two years ..." Th official warns that, "Delay in the installation of needed nuclear generating capacity can result in possible disruption of the nation's economy, in addition to serious inconvenience and expense to electric power consumers."

The electric industry has turned to nuclear power as a safe, reliable, economical and environmentally acceptable way to meet future electric power need of the nation. Currently, 61 nuclear power units are scheduled to go into operation between now and 1975. If these plants are delayed in commencing operations, the utility industry spokesman says there will be "serious electric power supply problems in the Northeast, Middle Atlantic, Southeast, Midwest, North Central, South Central, and Pacific Northwest regions of the country."

Th momentum of environmental protectionism has carried the country to the brink of disaster. Thre is no other interpretation to place upon the facts revealed by the Edison Electric Institute and its spokesman.

A SENSITIVE CIA MAN

By Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON--Although the CIA is supposed to be secret, everybody in Washington knows at least one person who works for it. My CIA connection is Rumplemeyer, who has been in and out of the cold for 25 years.

"Nobody understands us," Rumplemeyer told me the other day as we changed taxis for the third time to make sure no one was following us.

"Why do you say that?" I asked.

"Well, take all the hoopla about the CIA that is going on now. They are accusing us of every crime under the sun."

"Are the charges true or not?"

"I can't say," he replied.

"Let me get this straight, Rumplemeyer. Accusations have been made against 'the company' which could or could not be true and, although you say no one understands you, you can't respond to them."

"That's correct. If we answered the allegations we might compromise the illegal actions we had to take in order to do the job we're supposed to do."

"Well, how can we understand you if we don't know what you're doing?"

"Why can't you take us on faith?" he wanted to know.

"I'd like to, Rumplemeyer. Everyone would like to. But if we're not careful you people could turn out to be another KGB. You certainly wouldn't want a KGB in this country would you?"

"I'm not allowed to answer that," Rumplemeyer said.

"The problem as I see it," I said, "is that the American people want a strong intelligence agency, but not one that could turn against us."

"You think that way because you don't know us," Rumplemeyer said. "If you knew what we were doing you wouldn't say that."

"Well, what are you doing?" I asked.

"I can't tell you," Rumplemeyer said. "Let's get another taxi."

"We settled in our fourth cab.

"Nobody appreciates anything we do," he said sadly. "We're the only ones in this town who can't talk about our work. Do you think it's fun to go to a party and hear everyone bragging about his profession? The guy next door to me is a lawyer. When he wins a case he tells everyone on the block. Down the street is a man who works for the Defense Department. Every time he gives a billion dollars away he is congratulated. But if I overthrow a government, I have to keep my mouth shut. I can't even go to a cocktail party and say, 'I had lunch with a Polish defector today.' It gets to you after a while."

"Of course it does," I said sympathetically. "But don't forget, you chose to work for the company. Surely you knew what you were getting into when you joined up."

"Everybody needs appreciation," he said as tears came into his eyes. "We all like to hear people say, 'Well done.' "

"But how can I tell you 'Well done' when I have no idea what you did? Now if you said you were involved in the Chile operation, I could at least pat you on the back."

"I didn't say I was involved in the Chile operation," he said quickly.

"Then how can I give you any credit for it?"

"I don't want credit for Chile."

"Well, what do you want credit for?"

"I can't tell you. Can't you just say 'Well done' without knowing what I did? Is that asking too much?"

"All right, Rumplemeyer. Well done."

"What for?" he asked nervously.

"I have no idea."

"How did you know I was involved with that?" he said with alarm.

"I didn't. I just guessed it."

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: The Torturers

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON --We have seen enough of the seamy side of life to harden us to shock. But the letters that are smuggled to us from torture victims always leaves us shaken.

Priests who have been permitted inside the prisons of Brazil have brought us, at great personal risk, evidence of the inhumanity of the Brazilian military regime.

Friends and relatives have smuggled out letters from Cuban political prisoners, describing the horrors of Fidel Castro's concentration camps. We have spoken to an American girl, a gentle art teacher, who had been tortured by the Chilean military junta.

The latest letters have been delivered to us by friends of Olga Talamante, a 25-year-old U.S. citizen, who has been beaten and tortured with electric shock at a federal police station in the provincial town of Azui, Argentina. Her letters to her farm worker-parents and former school friends in California are graphic.

"We spent four days and four nights which were pure hell," she related. "They beat the hell out of us . ... There was no difference between day and night, as our heads were covered with coarse cloth bags and we weren't allowed to sleep.

"We were constantly interrogated and, of course, 'persuaded' with a special electric gadget to talk. The combination of physical punishment and psychological stress is something they're practiced for a long time, because they are really good at it.

"But not good enough!" she wrote in an aside from her cell.

"It's impossible to describe everything we went through, but it is very real. To think," she wrote, "that many other people have gone through it (torture) and have even died of it gives one a different dimension on one's own situation."

Talamante, who is in a cell with five women, indicated they are now being treated well and "have everything we need except dear freedom."

In the writing style of Anne Frank, whose family hid out from the Germans in Amsterdam during World War II, Talamante observed: "Ironically enough, there is a bird's nest on the jail's roof. I asked myself why that free dove chose a jail's roof to build its home. It's as if it wants to remind us that freedom still exists."

The American girl was arrested with a dozen Argentines just a few days after a state of siege was declared in Argentina. Police reports charge that the arrest site contained arms and subversive materials, which could bring a minimum three years' prison sentence under the sweeping new laws.

A former honor student at the University of California in Santa Cruz, Talamante journeyed to Argentina in August 1973 with money earned picking garlic. She taught English in Azui and planned to return to the United States on November 24 in time for Thanksgiving.

A friend, Rebecca Estrada, recalls that Talamante was particularly interested in political corruption in CIA-supported military regimes even though "she realized she was getting into heavy stuff."

An Argentine embassy spokesman told our reporters, Rozanne Weissman: "This case cannot be compared to those in Chile because we don't torture people in Argentina" and "we still have our legal procedures in force even during our state of siege."

Inside Labor

Victor Riesel

Manicured Mafia in 1975: Respected young prosecutor says flatly Mafia does $50 billion annual business in U.S.

NEW YORK An old Mafia don, whom Mike Wallace and I interviewed on television some years ago, blandly and quietly took my insults during the questioning. At one point I spat out something like, "The combine's shooting spree is as stupid as it's sadistic." His reply was "usta." I finally translated this as "used to be."

He was part of the Carlo Gambino family -- though he did die a natural death. Big man in labor here for a while. And it did take several years and a long broadcast discussion with the 34-year-old new regional Justice Department anti-organized crime strike force chief, Bill Aronwald, to realize how right the old don was.

There's lots of ugly muscle around. Some shooting. And, according to the federals, the last of the Gallo crowd (a weakening crew inside the so-called Colombo family) had better worry about extinction by lead poisoning in 1975.

But the Mafia, at least in the U.S., now is more than the stuff of which Godfather movies are made. The dons are sick, dying, just going into prison, or just coming out to be hit by new indictments. The FBI is concentrating on "quality investigation." Clarence Kelley's agents and desk specialists are going after the leading mob figures to "knock off the big men. Already they are confused and ineffective."

Don of dons Carlo Gambino is not well these days -- a malaise which wasn't helped by the subpoena just served on him. Others are like shadows in a dark room.

Coverage of the Mafia now must be different. Cetainly, the old names can be rolled out. But they're just confusing to the laymen - -like the three cousins who are Big Paul, Small Paul and Little Paul all with the same last name.

It's best simply to report that the biggest combine now is the Genovese group -- which actually is a holding company with five, maybe six, mini-families each controlled by powerful captains. And chairman of the board, allegedly, is the ailing 70-year-old Frank (Funzi) Tieri, who is not too well and is under federal indictment on charges of violating the Extortionate Credit Transactions Statute.

They're the most powerful "organization" in the East -- therefore in the nation. But that's not the top of th story.

As Bill Aronwald, whose coordinated anti-crime task force is made up of specialists ranging from the New York Police Departrment to the Securities and Exchange Commission, says, the Mafia is in big business. The younger men are literati and have seeped deeply into legitimate industries -- using fabulous sums of illegitimate money (and some muscle) to take over.

Don't look to Mulberry Street -- but to Madison Avenue, Park Avenue and Wall Street.

In all, the money they handle across the nation from one source or another comes to $50 billion (repeat billion) a year. I would not believe it if Bill Aronwald had not said it. He has sent some of the toughest Mafiosi to prison. He has a fantastic flow of intelligence from every conceivable investigative agency.

"This is a good ball park figure," says Aronwald. Actually, could be it's too low."

Aronwald views the Godfather films as a reporter does the thunder and blitzen newspaper city room movies. This almost unbelievable statistic includes the hug sums of money stolen from banks and brokerage houses. Little more than a year ago, for example, $15.3 million in U.S. Treasury bills disappeared from the Chase Manhattan Bank here. And more recently, $4.3 million disappeared from a Chicago security fault. These are but two of thousands of such thefts.

The money is washed and invested. So it's a new Mafia. Smooth. Not only deep in industry and some unions, but in powerful political machines. Always, sometimes subtly, sometimes overtly disdainful, the mob uses front men constantly accepted in the best of circles. Including Washington.

All of this is leading the Mafia's younger generation -- as it will be noticed in 1975 -- out of the big "central cities" and even their suburbs. The "muscled money" is heading South, West and Southwest. They're going across the Mississippi. They'll find old friends just over the river in Iowa. They're moving into Colorado, Arizona and Texas more deeply than ever, says one source who rarely has been wrong on the Mafia. There's more for them in Florida. And Georgia is open territory.

It isn't only the grit of the big cities which disturbs them with all that street crime and racial and ethnic competition. They're going where the money is' where the big ball teams are becoming the Yankees and Dodgers of old; where new developments spring up daily; where there's money in still unpurchased real estate; where there's new growth and investment money is needed.

"It's the whole gambit," says this source. "We follow them. For the real bosses, there's the money. They don't want to get knocked off by the FBI or the strike forces or muddied by the brainless muscle in loan sharking and fists for hire. You might say the Mafia, in a way, is going public."

Wonder what Godfather III will be like?

In Search of the American Dream

Changes develop in life styles

This article discusses the changes in American life -- migration of blacks to the cities, other ethnic problems and solutions and the rise of female independence. "America," as Archibald MacLeish said, "was promises" --- promises and a vision of utopian opportunity in a society leaving behind the castes and classes of the Old World.

Central to American utopianism is a belief in continuous progress in personal liberty, public morality, material possession, social harmony, and individual happiness, and an assumption that all these might be achieved simultaneously. But in the twentieth century such progress has been realilzed only partially and cyclically: the moral passion of 1911-1918, the individualistic prosperity of the 1920s, the collective action of the '30s -- each stressed one aspect of the American Dream. The real style of American utopianism, then, lies in the ability of Americans to maintain a faith in general perfection even while experienceing improvements only piecemeal. In the 1970s many Americans still believe in general progress but, as before, work toward the realization of particular ideals.

During the last decade, man's oldest and perhaps noblest dream, the dream of freedom, has been the repository of the rising expectations of a number of groups, particularly minorities and women. The movement among these groups for greater freedom is likely to persist and seems to be one of the chief vehicles for today's utopianism.

THIS AMERICAN, THIS NEW MAN

By 1900, most American minorities lived in cities. The Irish, Poles, Jews, and Italians tended to remain where they landed or to make their ways along railroad lines to large inland cities. After 1900, Southern rural blacks migrated northward in increasing numbers to industrial centers. In the cities,these minorities were often manipulated and oppressed.

Improvement in the legal, social and economic condition of minorities came only slowly.

At first, many Americans belonging to the white, Protestant majority were alarmed about the new ethnic face of society and attempted to restore the old one. In May of 1917, Congress passed, over President Wilson's veto, an act restricting immigration. Other anti-immigrant acts followed, including the National Origins Act of 1924, which set quotas for immigration based on the population of 1890 (thus reducing immigration from southern Europe); and an act forbidding Japanese immigration entirely, passed over Preisdent Coolidge's veto. Many contemporary observers felt that anti-immigrant sentiment played a part in the conviction and execution of Sacco and Vanzetti and in the defeat of Al Smith, a Catholic, in the presidential campaign of 1928. Meanwhile blacks suffered discrimination at the hands of the federal government, which segregated the civil service under Wilson. And the Ku Klux Klan, revived in 1915, reached its period of greatest and most visible power in the 1920s.

From this apex, nativist, antiminority impulses began only slowly to decline.

Black migration to cities accelerated during and after World War I. After the 1920s, but especially after World War II, Puerto Ricans left their island barrios for eastern cities and swelled the number of urban minorities. In California and the Southwest, the Chicano population grew steadily. White ethnic groups, blacks, Chicanos, and Puerto Ricans had to compete for a diminishing pool of marginal jobs, housing, and services. This competition as well as social conflict over the integtration of schools and residential areas, caused tensions which found occasional release in violence, riots, and small race wars.

Only after World War II was any real and steady improvement discernible. In March, 1945, Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York signed the first state Fair Employment Practices Act.

Two years later, President Truman told his Committee on Civil Rights: "I want our Bill of Rights implemented." The report of his committee, "To Secure These Rights" (1947), recommended "the elimination of segregation based on race, color, creed, or national origin, from American life," in housing, education, and employment. By his own executive orders Truman instituted fair employment practices in the civilian and military branches of the federal government. The crucial Supreme Court decision in Brown v. The Board of Education of Topeka (1954) demanded desegregation of public schools. The next decade brought the great civil rights marches, dramatic expressions of idealistic fervor.

The psychological impact of these legal changes in society was felt in the 1960s. The Kerner Commission report of 1968 revealed the extent to which racist attitudes pervaded society, and polemicists for racial minorities mounted an effective and sustained counterattack.

NEW ETHNIC WRITING

Especially after 1920, writers who were themselves members of ethnic minorities helped to enlarge the imagination and move the heart of other Americans by sympathetic portrayals of their fellows. Richard Wright's "Native Son" and Langston Hughes' "The Big Sea" began a movement cntinued by the fiction or poetry of Ralph Ellison, James Baldwin, Margaret Walker, Gwendolyn Brooks, Melvin B. Tolson and oher more recent black writers. Alfred Kazin's autobiography, "A Walker in the City," novels by Bernard Malamud, Saul Bellow, and Philip Roth, and poetry by Delmore Schwartz and David Ignatow suggest the large body of contemporary writing whose meaning is embedded in Jewish culture. Kay Bennett, in "Kaibah," and N. Scott Momaday, in "House Made of Dwn," have written brilliantly of native American life. Other writers have similarly dramatized the distinctive existence of their own particular ethnic groups in America.

The books of these writers suggest that perhaps the greatest source of the frustration for minorities has been their own belief in the American Dream of universal eqality. Immigrants from Poland, Russia, and Italy, as well as Puerto Ricans, Chicanos, and blacks, could all subscribe to the same belief: "There is always Room at the Top!" -- the motto of the class of 1886 at Tuskegeee Institute, the black college founded by Booker T. Washington -- or to the words of the Reverend Martin Luther King's speech of 1963, "I have a Dream." The struggle for racial and ethnic equality has been a revolution of rising expectations based on the acceptance of of long-standing utopian traditions in America and thus on the refusal to accept its long-standing inequities.

THIS AMERICAN, THIS NEW WOMAN

Women, too, have long fought for equality. In 1777, Abigail Adams discussed in a letter to her husband, later the president, the new laws to be instituted in America:

"If particular care ... is not paid to the ladies we are determined to foment a rebellion and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice or representation." Unfortunately, John Adams and his contemporaries did not listen; women struggled for more than 140 years for the right to vote, which was not fully achieved before 1920. Until then, suffrage was a goal so monumental and so urgent that it occasionally polarized women against other minority groups, who were simultaneously seeking to realize their visions of freedom Their single-minded goal caused such women leaders as Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton to condemn the enfranchisement of "Africans, Chinese, and all the ignorant foreigners the moment they touch our shores."

But the feminist movement has always been larger than the suffrage movement.

With increasing clarity, it has been concerned with the personal and collective liberation of women, the freedom for them to be fully human; and this effort, as Arthur M. Schlesinger remarked, has constituted "one of the noblest chapters in the history of American democracy." Today many white and black women leaders are working together to achieve their common goals.

Anais Nin once observed that "we do not understand the psychology of women (because) women have not articulated their experience." In her own autobiographical fiction, as well as in the workds of Jane Bowles, Sylvia Plath, Flannery O'Connor, Joyce Carol Oates, Nikki Giovanni, and many other recent women writers, that articulation is well under way, and both men and women have begun to understand the special nature and distinctions of womanhood.

CRISIS AND CONTINUITY

Many of the social, economic, racial, and sexual inequities which existed in America at the beginning of the twentieth century have disappeared. But with every improvement, the continuing vitality of utopian thinking has persisted in raising and increasing new expectations. In the largest sense, the continuity of American utopianism in response to crisis is itself one of the most striking features of our time. Americans have not yet written what Dr. Martin Luther King once called a "Bill of Rights for the Disadvantaged." Nor have they made politics pure and wars unthinkable, or perfected urban and rural life. They have not yet learned how to plan for progress in the context of constraints upon energy, resources, and human capacity. But their utopinaism has remained vital.

At the end of Fitzgerald's novel, "The Great Gatsby," Nick Carraway tries to imagine how the new world looked to its first explorers.

It offered, he says, "the last and greatest of all human dreams; for a transitory enchanted moment man must have held his breath in the presence of this continent, compelled into an aesthetic contemplation he neither understood nor desired, face to face for the last time in history with something commensurate to his capacity for wonder." Americans have not lost this capacity for wonder. Their continent is now occupied, but not yet wholly possessed. To possess it wholly, to create a society commensurate with the continent, to dream new dreams even as old ones are accomplished -- these are the tasks which future utopians, like those in the American past, must tyry to accomplish.

Mayor Frank Ferrell, seated, signs proclamation designating January as March of Dimes Month in Sikeston as Shirley Sullins, left, chairman of the Mothers March of Dimes, and Betty Statler, co-chairman, observe the signing at the City Administrative Building.

March of Dimes Month proclaimed

Mayor Frank Ferrell has proclaimed January March of Dimes Month in Sikeston

March of Dimes Month is sponsored by the National Foundation March of Dimes.

Ferrell said he is confident Sikeston residents will make a sincere effort to ensure the continued success of this organization which holds the promise of a healthier, brighter future.

The proclamation states that 200,000 American infants are born annually with birth defects and that birth defects are due to environmental as well as hereditary factors.

The National Foundation - March of Dimes provides communities with education and treatment facilities such as genetic counseling and prenatal care.

Research supported by March of Dimes grants continues daily to seek prevention of major threats to the physical and mental health of future generations. Past breakthroughs, says the proclamation, have been largely due to the generous support of millions of concerned Americans.

Health center activity in 1974 summarized

NEW MADRID — William S. Dillon, administrator of the New Madrid County Health Center has announced a summary of activities conducted by the center in 1974.

A certificate for completion of an 81-hour emergency medical technician course was received by the county sanitarian. Sanitation inspections included 223 food and food service establishments, National By-Products at Miner, sewage system of the South Lilbourn project, Delmo food projects, 18 motels, four hotels and 52 landfills.

Sixty water samples were collected and sent to the laboratory at Poplar Bluff, and 26 water plant inspections were made by the sanitarian and district sanitarian.

Five dog heads and two cat heads were collected and delivered to the Division of Health laboratory at Poplar Bluff for rabies testing. All were negative.

Thirty nuisance complaints were handled by the sanitarian and administrator. The sanitarian met with city boards on eight different occasions in regard to environmental health. St. John's Ditch was inspected with the Department of Conservation in regard to pollution, and a public meeting on sewage and water was attended at Matthews. Also, seven Head Start kitchens were inspected.

The health department nurses attended two seminars on continued nursing education in Sikeston and Poplar Bluff. Three toothbrushing clinics were held, and the following immunizations were given at clinics: polio, 3,428; smallpox, 51; tetanus, 1,963; measles, 251; measles and rubella, 839; diphtheria, 1,963; and pertussis, 1,055.

The nurses conducted 14 school clinics and 17 Head Start clinics and screened 156 children for sickle cell anemia.

Twenty-four family planning clinics at the health center were conducted for: new patients, 151; clinical attendance, 345; contraceptives (IUCD), 63; followups, 194; pap smears, 281; and contraceptives (oral), 74.

Forty-seven well-baby clinics were held with a total of 267 new patients and 512 return patients.

There were 473 office visits for the following diseases and causes: Tuberculosis, 46; chronic disease, 205; venereal disease, 34; cancer, 13; mental health, 52; heart, 7; family planning, 47; circulatory diseases, 37; and communicable diseases, 20.

The county nurses made 284 home visits for the following cases: Tuberculosis, 47; diabetes, 26; chronic diseases, 82; mental health, 12; stroke, 13; circulatory diseases, 65; cancer, 58; family planning, 12; maternal and child health, 50; communicable disease, 12; and dental, 6.

Tine tests were furnished for all schools in the county, including grades one through eight.

The nurses participated in the Sikeston chest clinics as a part of the TB work.

The nurses attended all district staff meetings. Three nurses attended an 80-hour course in first aid instructor classes. All three received certificates and are now qualified instructors for teaching multimedia and advanced first aid classes. They have taught six multimedia courses and two advanced courses and given 85 certificates.

The Home Health Agency, operating out of the health center at no expense to the county, made 1,073 licensed practical nurse visits in New Madrid County. A speech therapy program started in June, funded by the Missouri Division of Health, for pre-school age children. The therapist has seen 20 children for 26 sessions.

The administrator served on four task forces and attended four task force meetings. He also serves as a board member of the Council for Aging, attending 12 meetings, and as a board member of the American Lung Association of Eastern Missouri, attending two meetings.

As a member of the SeMo Association of Public Health Administrators, he attended 15 meetings. The purpose of the meetings was for the health department administrators to direct the business of the SeMo Home Health Agency.

The administrator made visits to four county schools, and the entire staff attended all quarterly district meetings.

Patient pay renewal unlikely

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.(AP)—Despite problems predicted by the wage cutoff to mental patients, state officials don't see much chance of restoring $520,000 to the proposed 1975-76 budget for patient pay.

State mental health officials are planning to drop wages as of Jan. 1 for some 500 patients because of a U.S. Supreme Court temporary injunction that allows Missouri to stop paying them.

A U.S. District Court decision last year ordered Missouri to pay mental patients for work under the federal wage and hour law.

Most working patients started getting paid 50 to 75 per cent of the minimum wage in July minus deductions for room and board.

Some patients will refuse to work and others will be disappointed, state hospital chiefs said, after hearing the wages would be dropped.

The cutoff will affect patients at Higginsville, Fulton, Farmington and Nevada, state officials said.

Dr. Nald Peterson, Fulton superintendent, said the wages had been working "very fine" as far as rehabilitating patients. "Patients were getting some reward for their labors and felt appreciated," he said.

Oil workers okay 26.8 per cent hike

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — The oil workers union approved a wage settlement with Gulf Oil Corp. on Friday hiking wages 26.8 per cent over two years.

The agreement, which apparently averted a threatened strike by the union, set a pattern for wage and benefit bargaining between the union and the nation's other oil companies.

Picketing continued, however, Friday at Gulf's Port Arthur, Tex., plant where 2,700 workers walked out Tuesday midnight when the union contract expired. The union said the strike there was on local issues and not connected with the national wage and benefit issues.

Oil workers currently make about $5.95 an hour. Key provisions of the new Gulf contract were: —A wage increase of 75 cents an hour beginning Jan. 8 this year, an additional 4 per cent on July 8 and an additional 8 per cent Jan. 8, 1976.

—A wage reopener clause for the second year of the contract if the cost of living in the nation rises more than 5 per cent from the Jan. 1, 1975 level.

—One more paid holiday. Workers now have nine paid holidays.

Improvements also were made in pension and hospitalization plans.

A. F. Grospiron, president of the 60,000-member Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, said that although the union did not get all it sought, he was pleased with the pact.

Traditionally when the union accepts an offer from one oil company, wage and other benefit issues are considered settled and the other oil companies follow the lead.

"The ingredients of the Gulf settlement will be applied as uniformly as they can be" to the other negotiations, said Grospiron.

The 12-member oil policy bargaining committee of the union approved the Gulf proposal early Friday morning in a six-hour meeting at union headquarters here.

The proposal, which was presented at the local level at the Gulf plant in Port Arthur, was referred to the committee for approval. The committee must approve all contract proposals before they can be voted on by the membership.

A union spokesman said it was expected to be several days before other oil companies submitted contract offers to local units and the offers were referred to the committee.

Covered in the Gulf contract would be 3,500 workers at eight refinery and related workers locals in California, Wyoming, Virginia, Texas, Ohio, Michigan, Connecticut and New York.

Stock market trading heaviest in 3 months

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market saluted falling interest rates and the prospect of a tax cut with a broad rally Friday in the heaviest trading in three months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 13.53 to 658.79 to finish the week with a gain of 24.25 points.

The closely followed indicator has risen 56.63 in the last two weeks.

Advances overwhelmed declines 1,417 to 191 among the 1,853 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume, at 25.89 million shares, was the largest total since Oct. 10, when 26.36 million were traded, and the seventh biggest ever.

The pace was particularly rapid in the first hour as the market made its initial response to news that President Ford had tentatively decided to propose a $15 billion cut in personal income taxes.

Meanwhile, several banks posted prime rate reductions in the wake of recent moves by the Federal Reserve away from the tight money policy it pursued for most of last year.

Rockwell International, the Big Board volume leader, was up 1/8 at 20.

Houston Oil & Minerals, the most active issue on the American Stock Exchange, jumped 2 3/8 to 29.

The Amex market-value index closed at 67.32, up 1.22.

Coyote bounty lifted

HILLSBORO, Mo. (AP)—A financial pinch is usually regarded as bad news, but Jefferson County's money problems may be the best thing that ever happened to the county's bobcat and coyote population.

The administrative county court here voted Thursday to eliminate bounty payments for the animals, saving an estimated $1,000 a year. The judges said it was one of a number of cuts to be made to balance the county budget.

Bobcats were worth $5 and coyotes $15 to hunters who took the animals to the county clerk's office.

The bounty elimination was also a boon to the county clerk, Eleanor Rehm.

In Search of the American Dream

Changes develop in life styles

Editor's Note: This is thhe 16th of 18 articles exploring the theme, In Search of the American Dream. This article discusses the changes in American life -- migration of blacks to the cities, other ethnic problems and solutions and the rise of female independence. The author is professor of English and contemporary literature at University of California, Irvine.

"America," as Archibald MacLeish said, "was promises" --- promises and a vision of utopian opportunity in a society leaving behind the castes and classes of the Old World.

Central to American utopianism is a belief in continuous progress in personal liberty, public morality, material possession, social harmony, and individual happiness, and an assumption that all these might be achieved simultaneously. But in the twentieth century such progress has been realilzed only partially and cyclically: the moral passion of 1911-1918, the individualistic prosperity of the 1920s, the collective action of the '30s -- each stressed one aspect of the American Dream. The real style of American utopianism, then, lies in the ability of Americans to maintain a faith in general perfection even while experienceing improvements only piecemeal. In the 1970s many Americans still believe in general progress but, as before, work toward the realization of particular ideals.

During the last decade, man's oldest and perhaps noblest dream, the dream of freedom, has been the repository of the rising expectations of a number of groups, particularly minorities and women. The movement among these groups for greater freedom is likely to persist and seems to be one of the chief vehicles for today's utopianism.

THIS AMERICAN, THIS NEW MAN

By 1900, most American minorities lived in cities. The Irish, Poles, Jews, and Italians tended to remain where they landed or to make their ways along railroad lines to large inland cities. After 1900, Southern rural blacks migrated northward in increasing numbers to industrial centers. In the cities,these minorities were often manipulated and oppressed.

Improvement in the legal, social and economic condition of minorities came only slowly.

At first, many Americans belonging to the white, Protestant majority were alarmed about the new ethnic face of society and attempted to restore the old one. In May of 1917, Congress passed, over President Wilson's veto, an act restricting immigration. Other anti-immigrant acts followed, including the National Origins Act of 1924, which set quotas for immigration based on the population of 1890 (thus reducing immigration from southern Europe); and an act forbidding Japanese immigration entirely, passed over Preisdent Coolidge's veto. Many contemporary observers felt that anti-immigrant sentiment played a part in the conviction and execution of Sacco and Vanzetti and in the defeat of Al Smith, a Catholic, in the presidential campaign of 1928. Meanwhile blacks suffered discrimination at the hands of the federal government, which segregated the civil service under Wilson. And the Ku Klux Klan, revived in 1915, reached its period of greatest and most visible power in the 1920s.

From this apex, nativist, antiminority impulses began only slowly to decline.

March of Dimes Month is sponsored by the National Foundation March of Dimes.

Ferrell said he is confident Sikeston residents will make a sincere effort to ensure the continued success of this organization which holds the promise of a healthier, brighter future.

The proclamation states that 200,000 American infants are born annually with birth defects and that birth defects are due to environmental as well as hereditary factors.

The National Foundation - March of Dimes provides communities with education and treatment facilities such as genetic counseling and prenatal care.

Research supported by March of Dimes grants continues daily to seek prevention of major threats to the physical and mental health of future generations. Past breakthroughs, says the proclamation, have been largely due to the generous support of millions of concerned Americans.

Health center activity in 1974 summarized

NEW MADRID — William S. Dillon, administrator of the New Madrid County Health Center has announced a summary of activities conducted by the center in 1974.

A certificate for completion of an 81-hour emergency medical technician course was received by the county sanitarian. Sanitation inspections included 223 food and food service establishments, National By-Products at Miner, sewage system of the South Lilbourn project, Delmo food projects, 18 motels, four hotels and 52 landfills.

Sixty water samples were collected and sent to the laboratory at Poplar Bluff, and 26 water plant inspections were made by the sanitarian and district sanitarian.

Five dog heads and two cat heads were collected and delivered to the Division of Health laboratory at Poplar Bluff for rabies testing. All were negative.

Thirty nuisance complaints were handled by the sanitarian and administrator. The sanitarian met with city boards on eight different occasions in regard to environmental health. St. John's Ditch was inspected with the Department of Conservation in regard to pollution, and a public meeting on sewage and water was attended at Matthews. Also, seven Head Start kitchens were inspected.

The health department nurses attended two seminars on continued nursing education in Sikeston and Poplar Bluff. Three toothbrushing clinics were held, and the following immunizations were given at clinics: polio, 3,428; smallpox, 51; tetanus, 1,963; measles, 251; measles and rubella, 839; diphtheria, 1,963; and pertussis, 1,055.

The nurses conducted 14 school clinics and 17 Head Start clinics and screened 156 children for sickle cell anemia.

Twenty-four family planning clinics at the health center were conducted for: new patients, 151; clinical attendance, 345; contraceptives (IUCD), 63; followups, 194; pap smears, 281; and contraceptives (oral), 74.

Forty-seven well-baby clinics were held with a total of 267 new patients and 512 return patients.

There were 473 office visits for the following diseases and causes: Tuberculosis, 46; chronic disease, 205; venereal disease, 34; cancer, 13; mental health, 52; heart, 7; family planning, 47; circulatory diseases, 37; and communicable diseases, 20.

The county nurses made 284 home visits for the following cases: Tuberculosis, 47; diabetes, 26; chronic diseases, 82; mental health, 12; stroke, 13; circulatory diseases, 65; cancer, 58; family planning, 12; maternal and child health, 50; communicable disease, 12; and dental, 6.

Tine tests were furnished for all schools in the county, including grades one through eight.

The nurses participated in the Sikeston chest clinics as a part of the TB work.

The nurses attended all district staff meetings. Three nurses attended an 80-hour course in first aid instructor classes. All three received certificates and are now qualified instructors for teaching multimedia and advanced first aid classes. They have taught six multimedia courses and two advanced courses and given 85 certificates.

The Home Health Agency, operating out of the health center at no expense to the county, made 1,073 licensed practical nurse visits in New Madrid County. A speech therapy program started in June, funded by the Missouri Division of Health, for pre-school age children. The therapist has seen 20 children for 26 sessions.

The administrator served on four task forces and attended four task force meetings. He also serves as a board member of the Council for Aging, attending 12 meetings, and as a board member of the American Lung Association of Eastern Missouri, attending two meetings.

As a member of the SeMo Association of Public Health Administrators, he attended 15 meetings. The purpose of the meetings was for the health department administrators to direct the business of the SeMo Home Health Agency.

The administrator made visits to four county schools, and the entire staff attended all quarterly district meetings.

Patient pay renewal unlikely

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.(AP)—Despite problems predicted by the wage cutoff to mental patients, state officials don't see much chance of restoring $520,000 to the proposed 1975-76 budget for patient pay.

State mental health officials are planning to drop wages as of Jan. 1 for some 500 patients because of a U.S. Supreme Court temporary injunction that allows Missouri to stop paying them.

A U.S. District Court decision last year ordered Missouri to pay mental patients for work under the federal wage and hour law.

Most working patients started getting paid 50 to 75 per cent of the minimum wage in July minus deductions for room and board.

Some patients will refuse to work and others will be disappointed, state hospital chiefs said, after hearing the wages would be dropped.

The cutoff will affect patients at Higginsville, Fulton, Farmington and Nevada, state officials said.

Dr. Nald Peterson, Fulton superintendent, said the wages had been working "very fine" as far as rehabilitating patients. "Patients were getting some reward for their labors and felt appreciated," he said.

Oil workers okay 26.8 per cent hike

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — The oil workers union approved a wage settlement with Gulf Oil Corp. on Friday hiking wages 26.8 per cent over two years.

The agreement, which apparently averted a threatened strike by the union, set a pattern for wage and benefit bargaining between the union and the nation's other oil companies.

Picketing continued, however, Friday at Gulf's Port Arthur, Tex., plant where 2,700 workers walked out Tuesday midnight when the union contract expired. The union said the strike there was on local issues and not connected with the national wage and benefit issues.

Oil workers currently make about $5.95 an hour. Key provisions of the new Gulf contract were: —A wage increase of 75 cents an hour beginning Jan. 8 this year, an additional 4 per cent on July 8 and an additional 8 per cent Jan. 8, 1976.

—A wage reopener clause for the second year of the contract if the cost of living in the nation rises more than 5 per cent from the Jan. 1, 1975 level.

—One more paid holiday. Workers now have nine paid holidays.

Improvements also were made in pension and hospitalization plans.

A. F. Grospiron, president of the 60,000-member Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, said that although the union did not get all it sought, he was pleased with the pact.

Traditionally when the union accepts an offer from one oil company, wage and other benefit issues are considered settled and the other oil companies follow the lead.

"The ingredients of the Gulf settlement will be applied as uniformly as they can be" to the other negotiations, said Grospiron.

The 12-member oil policy bargaining committee of the union approved the Gulf proposal early Friday morning in a six-hour meeting at union headquarters here.

The proposal, which was presented at the local level at the Gulf plant in Port Arthur, was referred to the committee for approval. The committee must approve all contract proposals before they can be voted on by the membership.

A union spokesman said it was expected to be several days before other oil companies submitted contract offers to local units and the offers were referred to the committee.

Covered in the Gulf contract would be 3,500 workers at eight refinery and related workers locals in California, Wyoming, Virginia, Texas, Ohio, Michigan, Connecticut and New York.

Stock market trading heaviest in 3 months

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market saluted falling interest rates and the prospect of a tax cut with a broad rally Friday in the heaviest trading in three months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 13.53 to 658.79 to finish the week with a gain of 24.25 points.

The closely followed indicator has risen 56.63 in the last two weeks.

Advances overwhelmed declines 1,417 to 191 among the 1,853 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume, at 25.89 million shares, was the largest total since Oct. 10, when 26.36 million were traded, and the seventh biggest ever.

The pace was particularly rapid in the first hour as the market made its initial response to news that President Ford had tentatively decided to propose a $15 billion cut in personal income taxes.

Meanwhile, several banks posted prime rate reductions in the wake of recent moves by the Federal Reserve away from the tight money policy it pursued for most of last year.

Rockwell International, the Big Board volume leader, was up 1/8 at 20.

Houston Oil & Minerals, the most active issue on the American Stock Exchange, jumped 2 3/8 to 29.

The Amex market-value index closed at 67.32, up 1.22.

Coyote bounty lifted

HILLSBORO, Mo. (AP)—A financial pinch is usually regarded as bad news, but Jefferson County's money problems may be the best thing that ever happened to the county's bobcat and coyote population.

The administrative county court here voted Thursday to eliminate bounty payments for the animals, saving an estimated $1,000 a year. The judges said it was one of a number of cuts to be made to balance the county budget.

Bobcats were worth $5 and coyotes $15 to hunters who took the animals to the county clerk's office.

The bounty elimination was also a boon to the county clerk, Eleanor Rehm.

Straight pins, made first of bone and later of wood, were used to hold documents together in Roman times.

"more spice than everything nice"

Ann Landers

Reader zeroes in advice for lonesome teen-agers

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to say a few words to that 16- year-old guy who said he was "laughing on the outside and crying on the inside."

His folks keep telling him that high school years should be the happiest of his entire life, but he complained that his social life was dull as dishwater and he wasn't very popular with either boys or girls. Everywhere he looked people seemed to be having a great time.

You answered, "Teen years can be the roughest," and told him he was not alone. I'm in agreement with you, Ann, but I have some suggestion that might help.

The surest way to be unpopular is to think you are. Stop being so concerned with people's opinion of you. Relax and enjoy yourself. Go out of your way to be pleasant and thoughtful. Start really listening and being interested in what others have to say. You'll be surprised at their reactions.

If you'd like to get to know a girl better, ask her for a date. She won't ask YOU. Start showing more friendliness -- to everybody. You sound like a nice young man with deep feelings. There are plenty of people who would love to be your friend. So take my advice and I'll bet you'll notice a big change in your life before long. -- Pulling For You.

Dear Pulling: Thank you for a truly constructive letter. You've done a nifty job of zeoring in on the problem. I can vouch for the fact that if all lonesome teenagers would follow your advice they'd be a lot happier.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read "Married In Name Only" -- the minister's wife who had celibacy forced on her. Let me tell you MY story, and I'm praying for some solid answers, as are thousands of other women who are in the same boat.

My husband wasn't a minister but we had a wonderful marriage. At the age of 42, even though he told me I was still very attractive, a wonderful wife, a lovely mother, a fine cook, great in bed, and he loved my sense of humor, SOMETHING was missing. He didn't know what. I found out "what" when I caught him with a woman old enough to be his mother. He wanted a divorce so they could be married. I agreed.

It nearly killed me to lose this wonderful man, but with the help of some generous and considerate friends I pulled myself together, got a job, and began to raise our son -- alone. It was plenty rough at the age of 40 to put my sex life on "hold."

The minister's wife didn't ask me, but if she had I would have told her that living without sex wouldn't kill her. Praying for Divine Guidance may work for her, but it didn't work for me. My husband was a marriage counselor and he knew all the answers. Suggestions, anybody? -- D.E.S.

Dear D.E.S.: This might sound like a mighty feeble response -- and to be perfectly truthful, I'm not very proud of it, but your advice to the minister's wife might be the answer for you.

In the meantime, keep it altogether, stay alert, attractive and in the mainstream of life. Don't hang around with widows and other divorcees. A woman who has all the qualities your ex-husband attributed to you shouldn't have to spend the rest of her life alone. Good luck, honey.

California woman is . . .

"Little Miss Winemaker"

Mary Ann Graf

HEALDSBURG, Calif. (AP)— In the Decidedly masculine world of winemaking, a name like Mary Ann Graf stands out.

She is the only woman winemaker in a major California winery.

"When I was in college I didn't particularly give it a whole lot of thought whether it was a man's business or a woman's business," she said. "It was a business and I don't think I had any problems getting into it," she said.

Miss Graf, 31, graduated from the University of California at Davis in 1965 with a degree from their enology department.

The image of winemaking is so masculine that when the university's enology department added a woman to its staff not long ago it was an occasion for nationwide news attention.

But Miss Graf said despite her relatively young age, compared to much older industry figures, and her gender she had no trouble finding a job.

"There haven't been any obstacles to me, really, because I'm a woman," she said.

"I don't want to use it as a crutch. Sometimes it could be very useful...if you can't get your way one way...but people are wising up to that."

After college she spent 4 ½ years working for a winery near Sacramento that specializes in fruit wines. Later she worked at one of the state's largest wineries, in northern Sonoma County, then worked in the laboratory of a premium winemaker.

She was hired by the Simi Winery in February of 1973.

She said in an interview in her lab at Simi, located on the outskirts of this Sonoma County town on the Russian River, that she had recently received a questionnaire asking about women in business.

"I was hard pressed to find things to write about because I don't spend a lot of time thinking about it," she said. "I'm not particularly militant about the feminist movement because I've got other things to do. I have to worry about doing a good job just like any man has to worry about doing a nood job."

Mary Ann is so enthusiastic about her work she occasionally helps out in the winery's tasting room on crowded weekends.

No one recognizes her, but that may change.

"I do have an advantage being a woman," she said.

"You're interviewing me," she said to a writer," and I've been on two television panel shows. It's a case of my being a novelty. People want to talk to me,"

But she'd rather be known for the quality of wine she makes, which experts rate highly.

"I think the important thing is that ultimately, I hope I'm judged by whether I'm a good winemaker-not 'she's a good winemaker for a woman.'"

Simi was started in the last century but was in near dormancy until it was purchased five years ago and revived by Russell Green, the former head of Signal Oil. Green had a home and vineyard land in the nearby Alexander Valley

"In this winery, which is smaller, the winemaker has to do a little bit of everything. I buy all the glass (bottles), make sure we have corks, so on. These aren't necessarily winemaking things, but...

"It's been said that a winemaker isn't just an enologist. You've got to be a microbiologist, an engineer, a plant pathologist, a little bit of everything."

Area woman heads heart fund campaign

Mrs. W. L. Shuford

CHAFFEE - Mrs. W. L. Shuford recently was appointed chairwoman of the Scott County Heart Fund drive by John P. Knox, state campaign chairman.

Mrs. Shuford has served as chairwoman of the Heart Fund drive in Scott County for the past three years and has been Chaffee community chairwoman for six years.

Besides being a member of several women's clubs, she is currently the national and state legislative director of the Ladies Auxiliary of the United Transportation Union. She attends First Baptist Church.

In 1971, she was named Woman of the Year by District VI Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

A nationwide canvass will be conducted Feb. 1-28 to finance research, education and community heart programs of the American Heart Association.

In Scott County, latest statistics show 58 per cent of 406 deaths recorded were caused by a diseased heart or circulatory system.

MARTHA SAYS...

When making curtains many wonder just how to figure for just the right amount of fullness. If you are making sheer curtains that are to be used alone, three times the width of the window is the most attractive. But if you are using these under draperies, two times the window width is best. After you have decided how much fullness is needed and how long the curtains are to be -- figure the yardage for whatever width fabric you are using and allow another one-third yard. This will allow for a three-inch hem and ½ inch turn under and the rest is used for the headings. If you are going to use these on traverse rods the extra fabric will be enough to enclose the bucram used in the heading for pinch pleats or if you plan to use pleater tape fold this fabric so that you will have a doubled hem behind the pleater tape. The doubled layer gives more support and hides raw edges. If you are planning a simple heading on your curtains allow ½ yard for hems and headings.

Curtains are being made from a variety of fabrics. Consider this when you pay.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Everytime someone mentions the country's state of depression, someone will smile and say optimistically, "Yes, but it will bring families closer together."

Then they will lauch into a nostaglic reminiscence of families sitting around popping corn, eating apples and playing Happy Days Are Here Again on their spoons.

Heaven knows we could use a little of that. Just the other day I responded to the doorbell and ordered a lipstick and a jar of bath crystals before I realized the caller wasn't the Avon lady, but my daughter who had forgotten her key.

As I was telling mother, "I never got the breaks like the other people. Leave it to me to be born just after the depression. Tell me about the popcorn and the togetherness.

"We got on each other's nerves so bad I thought I'd go crazy," she said. "No TV, no pizza, no stereo."

"But the games, you all sat around and played games."

"Did you ever play Chinese checkers with Kung Fu? Your father used to get so mad when you jumped his marbles, he just smashed the whole board."

"But the neighbors. You really had a sense of reaching out and saying, 'Hey, gang, we're all in this thing together,' right?"

"I didn't know 'em. We didn't have dryers then and in the winter I'd count to ten, run outside and hang up a lineful of clothes with the steam rolling off them and try to get pins in them before they froze solid. I got more bruises from frozen underwear than I care to remember."

"But the values," I persisted, "they were basic and they were good then. And there was a feeling of determination, motivated by a sense of survival coupled with a moralistic code that strengthened the family structure."

She thought a moment. "That's easy for you to day. But we spent all our time trying to get your Uncle Howard to work. They called him one day for a job and he went to bed with a headache for a week. He still gets a chill when he thinks how close he came to finding employment."

"Ah, those wonderful bologna, yellow soap, oven-to-heat-the-kitchen-days are coming back," I mused, "and when they do families will be drawn closer together."

"That's true," sighed Mother. "Had the depression gone on another year, your father would have gone home to his family, your uncle would have been put up for adoption to strangers and I would have gone to live with a friend and her mother."

Come to think of it, the optimists never say "whose" family you'll be closer to.

In the meantime, keep it altogether, stay alert, attractive and in the mainstream of life. Don't hang around with widows and other divorcees. A woman who has all the qualities your ex-husband attributed to you shouldn't have to spend the rest of her life alone. Good luck, honey.

Attention Club Officers

To update the club calendar, I would like the club president or publicity chairman of any women's club or organization pertaining to women's activities in the Sikeston area to send in a list of regularly scheduled meetings. Please include the time, place, hostess and program, if any, for each meeting.

In addition, please include a current list of club officers, their addresses and telephone numbers. Also indicate the date when new officers are to be installed.

The Daily Standard appreciates any black and white photos properly identified of club happenings and also important news events.

Good coverage of club news depends on cooperation.

California woman is . . .

"Little Miss Winemaker"

Mary Ann Graf

HEALDSBURG, Calif. (AP)—In the Decidedly masculine world of winemaking, a name like Mary Ann Graf stands out.

She is the only woman winemaker in a major California winery.

"When I was in college I didn't particularly give it a whole lot of thought whether it was a man's business or a woman's business," she said. "It was a business and I don't think I had any problems getting into it," she said.

Miss Graf, 31, graduated from the University of California at Davis in 1965 with a degree from their enology department.

The image of winemaking is so masculine that when the university's enology department added a woman to its staff not long ago it was an occasion for nationwide news attention.

But Miss Graf said despite her relatively young age, compared to much older industry figures, and her gender she had no trouble finding a job.

"There haven't been any obstacles to me, really, because I'm a woman," she said.

"I don't want to use it as a crutch. Sometimes it could be very useful...if you can't get your way one way...but people are wising up to that."

After college she spent 4 ½ years working for a winery near Sacramento that specializes in fruit wines. Later she worked at one of the state's largest wineries, in northern Sonoma County, then worked in the laboratory of a premium winemaker.

She was hired by the Simi Winery in February of 1973.

She said in an interview in her lab at Simi, located on the outskirts of this Sonoma County town on the Russian River, that she had recently received a questionnaire asking about women in business.

"I was hard pressed to find things to write about because I don't spend a lot of time thinking about it," she said. "I'm not particularly militant about the feminist movement because I've got other things to do. I have to worry about doing a good job just like any man has to worry about doing a nood job."

Mary Ann is so enthusiastic about her work she occasionally helps out in the winery's tasting room on crowded weekends.

No one recognizes her, but that may change.

"I do have an advantage being a woman," she said.

"You're interviewing me," she said to a writer," and I've been on two television panel shows. It's a case of my being a novelty. People want to talk to me,"

But she'd rather be known for the quality of wine she makes, which experts rate highly.

"I think the important thing is that ultimately, I hope I'm judged by whether I'm a good winemaker-not 'she's a good winemaker for a woman.'"

Simi was started in the last century but was in near dormancy until it was purchased five years ago and revived by Russell Green, the former head of Signal Oil. Green had a home and vineyard land in the nearby Alexander Valley

"In this winery, which is smaller, the winemaker has to do a little bit of everything. I buy all the glass (bottles), make sure we have corks, so on. These aren't necessarily winemaking things, but...

"It's been said that a winemaker isn't just an enologist. You've got to be a microbiologist, an engineer, a plant pathologist, a little bit of everything."

Area woman heads heart fund campaign

Mrs. W. L. Shuford

CHAFFEE - Mrs. W. L. Shuford recently was appointed chairwoman of the Scott County Heart Fund drive by John P. Knox, state campaign chairman.

Mrs. Shuford has served as chairwoman of the Heart Fund drive in Scott County for the past three years and has been Chaffee community chairwoman for six years.

Besides being a member of several women's clubs, she is currently the national and state legislative director of the Ladies Auxiliary of the United Transportation Union. She attends First Baptist Church.

In 1971, she was named Woman of the Year by District VI Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

A nationwide canvass will be conducted Feb. 1-28 to finance research, education and community heart programs of the American Heart Association.

In Scott County, latest statistics show 58 per cent of 406 deaths recorded were caused by a diseased heart or circulatory system.

MARTHA SAYS...

When making curtains many wonder just how to figure for just the right amount of fullness. If you are making sheer curtains that are to be used alone, three times the width of the window is the most attractive. But if you are using these under draperies, two times the window width is best. After you have decided how much fullness is needed and how long the curtains are to be -- figure the yardage for whatever width fabric you are using and allow another one-third yard. This will allow for a three-inch hem and ½ inch turn under and the rest is used for the headings. If you are going to use these on traverse rods the extra fabric will be enough to enclose the bucram used in the heading for pinch pleats or if you plan to use pleater tape fold this fabric so that you will have a doubled hem behind the pleater tape. The doubled layer gives more support and hides raw edges. If you are planning a simple heading on your curtains allow ½ yard for hems and headings.

Curtains are being made from a variety of fabrics. Consider this when you pay.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Everytime someone mentions the country's state of depression, someone will smile and say optimistically, "Yes, but it will bring families closer together."

Then they will lauch into a nostaglic reminiscence of families sitting around popping corn, eating apples and playing Happy Days Are Here Again on their spoons.

Heaven knows we could use a little of that. Just the other day I responded to the doorbell and ordered a lipstick and a jar of bath crystals before I realized the caller wasn't the Avon lady, but my daughter who had forgotten her key.

As I was telling mother, "I never got the breaks like the other people. Leave it to me to be born just after the depression. Tell me about the popcorn and the togetherness.

"We got on each other's nerves so bad I thought I'd go crazy," she said. "No TV, no pizza, no stereo."

"But the games, you all sat around and played games."

"Did you ever play Chinese checkers with Kung Fu? Your father used to get so mad when you jumped his marbles, he just smashed the whole board."

"But the neighbors. You really had a sense of reaching out and saying, 'Hey, gang, we're all in this thing together,' right?"

"I didn't know 'em. We didn't have dryers then and in the winter I'd count to ten, run outside and hang up a lineful of clothes with the steam rolling off them and try to get pins in them before they froze solid. I got more bruises from frozen underwear than I care to remember."

"But the values," I persisted, "they were basic and they were good then. And there was a feeling of determination, motivated by a sense of survival coupled with a moralistic code that strengthened the family structure."

She thought a moment. "That's easy for you to day. But we spent all our time trying to get your Uncle Howard to work. They called him one day for a job and he went to bed with a headache for a week. He still gets a chill when he thinks how close he came to finding employment."

"Ah, those wonderful bologna, yellow soap, oven-to-heat-the-kitchen-days are coming back," I mused, "and when they do families will be drawn closer together."

"That's true," sighed Mother. "Had the depression gone on another year, your father would have gone home to his family, your uncle would have been put up for adoption to strangers and I would have gone to live with a friend and her mother."

Come to think of it, the optimists never say "whose" family you'll be closer to.

Short course designed for women landowners

Kelly Hawks rip Advance Hornets

ADVANCE — Coach Nick Lanpher's Kelly Hawks used a balanced scoring attack and a stingy defense to rip coach Carroll Cookson's AHS Hornets 71-62 here Friday night and hand the Hornets their second straight loss.

The Hornets fell behind by eight in the first period and never were able to get any closer as their defense was unable to stop the shooting of Mike Brasher, Ron Schlosser and Bob Felter in particular as the three Hawks teamed for 50 of the Hawks 71 points.

Advance was unable to get their inside scoring underway as Russ Mothershead and Bob Felter shut off Danny Long and Royce Young and David Tropf was only able to net 16 points.

After falling behind by eight in the first eight minutes of play the Hawks continued to shut off the Hornet scoring attack and add to their lead by scoring 24 points in the second quarter while the Hornets were scoring only 14. Kelly held a 42-24 halftime lead and looked as if they were going to blow the Hornets out of their own nest.

Advance came out pressing in the third period and with guard Steve Cookson leading the fast-break the Hornets came roaring back with 20 points to 12 for Kelly.

Kelly solved the pressing tactics of Advance in the fourth period and the Hawks defense stiffened and the closest Advance could get was eight points.

Kelly pumped in 28 field goals while the Hornets were only able to net 18. Advance hit 26 free throws to 15 for the Hawks.

Felter, Schlosser and Brasher scored 18 and 16 points respectively for Kelly and Cookson scored 27 for Advance.

Kelly won the junior varsity game 57-40 as Felter scored 15 points and Steve Vavak scored 21 for the Hornets.

Pirate tactics backfire

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The Cape Central Tigers used a press defense to spoil the Perryville Pirates stalling tactics to win a SEMO conference game here Friday night 57-23.

Perryville came out in the first period with the idea of beating the Tigers in a very low scoring game by keeping the ball away from their opponent but the strategy backfired as Central pressed and took the ball away from the Pirates and ran up a 6-0 score early in the first period and Perryville was never in the game.

Cape Central held a 41-14 lead with six minutes left in the ball game.

Stan Ray dominated the game underneath the basket with 24 points before being taken out in the fourth period after Central had won the game.

Puxico beats Rams

SCOTT CITY - It was a nip-and-tuck battle the first half before Puxico took command the final half to come away with a 66-49 win over Scott City. The Rams fell behind 14-6 in the first quarter before pulling to within one at the halfway mark. The Indians came on strong in the third to take a five-point lead into the final period where they blitzed Scott City 24-12 to win going away. Puxico's record climbed to 3 & 7 on the year while Scott City's fell to 1 & 8. Will Smith of Puxico was most of the story as he burned the nets for 26 points. Gary Sample had 16 for the losers.

Puxico claimed the double win on the evening as the junior varsity outscrapped the Rams 49-45. Randy Campbell was high for Puxico with 15. Bob Campbell had 11 for Scott City.

Reindeer win

CLARKTON - Clutch free-throw shooting in the final seconds of the game won a close one for Clarkton here Friday night. The Reindeer jumped off to a 21-14 lead in the first quarter and saw it evaporate to three at halftime. A little daylight showed through in the third as Clarkton upped their lead to 9 at 57-48. But then came the Bernie charge as the Mules tied it up 68-68 with only seconds left on the clock. That's when Clarkton's Mike Stillman stepped to the charity line and calmly sank his first shot on a one-and-one to give the Reindeer the victory. Bernie's Reuben Steuven was the game's high point man with 21. Mickey Gum hooped 17 for Clarkton.

The Reindeer had a little easier time of it in the junior varsity contest as Clarkton completed the sweep on the night downing the Bernie JV 52-39. James Caldwell had 19 for the winners with the Carson brothers and Jim Pointer leading the Mules attack with 10 each.

Zalma beats Preps

CAPE GIRARDEAU — College High played it close for three quarters here Friday night before coming apart in the final frame to let Zalma take a 65-59 win. Down by only two points in the first quarter, the Preps stayed there at halftime before zipping into a 46-42 lead at the end of three. Foul trouble spelled the difference in the last eight minutes of play as the Bulldogs sank free throw after free throw to take the quarter 23-13 and the victory. Zalma wound up the game with a 21-7 edge over College High from the charity strip. Carl Lineberry paced Zalma's attack with 20 points on the night. Luke Cano had 21 for the College Preps.

The junior varsity contest wa just as hotly contested with the result reversed as College High took it 45-44. High point man for the game with 28 was Dennis Wheetly of Zalma. College High's Paul Nunnelee ended with 14.

Tigers upset Malden

NEELYVILLE — The Malden Greenwave failed to overcome the foul-shooting of Neelyville here Friday night, losing to the Tigers 79-76. Malden outshot the host from the field 36-28 but the Tigers managed a whooping 23-4 advantage from the free throw line to claim the victory. Neelyville led in the game through the first two quarters before the Greenwave pulled out front by two in the third period. Then the charity stripe started giving the Tigers the edge as they took the final quarter 19-14 to win the game and move their season's mark to 7 & 3. The loss dropped Malden to 4 & 4 on the year. Leonard Thompson again the hot hand for Malden as he pumped in 26 to lead all scorers. Teammate Clarence Sherrod, playing on a sprained ankle, still netted 16 in a game effort, too. High man for Neelyville was Dean Deckard with 25.

Malden salvaged part of the night with an overtime victory in the JV contest over Neelyville 75-72. Melvin James shoveled in 29 markers for Malden as Andrew Robinson and James Pattey led the Tigers with 18 apiece.

Matthews downs Eagles

MATTHEWS The MHS Pirates fell behind by three points, 21-18, but came on strong in beating the Oran Eagles here Friday night.

Thw two teams started out running and firing the ball at the baskets but the Pirates had the most success in the finding the hoop as they hit 34 field goal shots to 29 for the Eagles.

After the Eagles enjoyed a 21-18 first period lead Matthews began to press and forced Oran into turnovers and the Pirates defense caused the Eagles to lose sight of the basket and the home team forged ahead 42-34 at the half.

Oran was unable to solve the Pirates defense in the third period and Matthews increased their lead by outscoring Oran 20-15 to put the game out of reach. Oran outpointed the Pirates by two points in the fourth period.

Matthews had all five starters on target as four players scored in double figures with David Kenedy dropping in 16 for high game honnors. Ronnie Hurts scored 19 for the Eagles.

Matthews won the junior varsity game 59-50 as Art Vann scored 15 points for Matthews and Friga scored 17 for Oran.

Eagles beat Chaffee

EAST PRAIRIE - The Chaffee Red Devils just couldn't handle the EPHS Eagles on the latters home court and the Eagles won their first Scott-Mississippi conference game 66-58 here Friday night.

Chaffee out gunned the home team in the first period with David McConnell and Lindy Duncan dropping in the point but the Red Devils defense allowed Donald Dixon and Grady Williford to first back and East Prairie's two gunners were more powerful than the two guns for Chaffee.

Chaffee ran to a 19-14 first period lead and held onto the advantage through the second period as both teams exchanged baskets for 19 points apiece.

East Prairie's defense became more aggressive in the second half and the Eagles slowed Duncan and McConnell as Williford and Dixon came on stronger and EPHS outscored the visitors 14-10 in the third quarter.

Chaffee's shooting fell off again in the last period and the home team advantage paid off for East Prairie as the Eagles scored 19 points to only 10 for Chaffee.

Duncan and McConnell scored 22 and 21 points respectively and Dixon and Williford scored 26 points apiece for the Eagles.

The loss left Chaffee with a 7-3 record and East Prairie is 5-8.

Chaffee won the junior varsity game 60-50 as Curd scored 19 for the winners and Johnson scored 12 for East Prairie.

Hayti upsets Lions

SENATH — North Pemiscot gunned down Delta C-7 in the Senath-Hornersville Tournament here Friday night 73-40. Dominating the basket and the boards, the Mustangs swept to their 12th victory of the year to go with just one defeat. The Chargers were unable to break the double-figure mark until the fourth period when they broke through the Mustangs reserves for a 1915 advantage. But it was a case of much too little too late as NPHS had already built a 58-21 lead at the end of three quarters. Ray Dunbar's 18 points was high for North Pemiscot and Thomas Mead matched that total for Delta C-7.

Hayti used a 34-20 lead at halftime to hang on for a final 53-51 victory over Senath in the night-cap. Senath defensed the Indians well in the second half but couldn't come back from a 22-11 Hayti second quarter. The loss dropped Senath to 9 & 3 on the year as Hayti climbed two over the .500 mark at 6 & 4. Willie Walker captured game honors for Hayti with 18 points. Ottis Lemmons had 17 for Senath.

Kelly Hawks rip Advance Hornets

ADVANCE — Coach Nick Lanpher's Kelly Hawks used a balanced scoring attack and a stingy defense to rip coach Carroll Cookson's AHS Hornets 71-62 here Friday night and hand the Hornets their second straight loss.

The Hornets fell behind by eight in the first period and never were able to get any closer as their defense was unable to stop the shooting of Mike Brasher, Ron Schlosser and Bob Felter in particular as the three Hawks teamed for 50 of the Hawks 71 points.

Advance was unable to get their inside scoring underway as Russ Mothershead and Bob Felter shut off Danny Long and Royce Young and David Tropf was only able to net 16 points.

After falling behind by eight in the first eight minutes of play the Hawks continued to shut off the Hornet scoring attack and add to their lead by scoring 24 points in the second quarter while the Hornets were scoring only 14. Kelly held a 42-24 halftime lead and looked as if they were going to blow the Hornets out of their own nest.

Advance came out pressing in the third period and with guard Steve Cookson leading the fast-break the Hornets came roaring back with 20 points to 12 for Kelly.

Kelly solved the pressing tactics of Advance in the fourth period and the Hawks defense stiffened and the closest Advance could get was eight points.

Kelly pumped in 28 field goals while the Hornets were only able to net 18. Advance hit 26 free throws to 15 for the Hawks.

Felter, Schlosser and Brasher scored 18 and 16 points respectively for Kelly and Cookson scored 27 for Advance.

Kelly won the junior varsity game 57-40 as Felter scored 15 points and Steve Vavak scored 21 for the Hornets.

Pirate tactics backfire

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The Cape Central Tigers used a press defense to spoil the Perryville Pirates stalling tactics to win a SEMO conference game here Friday night 57-23.

Perryville came out in the first period with the idea of beating the Tigers in a very low scoring game by keeping the ball away from their opponent but the strategy backfired as Central pressed and took the ball away from the Pirates and ran up a 6-0 score early in the first period and Perryville was never in the game.

Cape Central held a 41-14 lead with six minutes left in the ball game.

Stan Ray dominated the game underneath the basket with 24 points before being taken out in the fourth period after Central had won the game.

Puxico beats Rams

SCOTT CITY - It was a nip-and-tuck battle the first half before Puxico took command the final half to come away with a 66-49 win over Scott City. The Rams fell behind 14-6 in the first quarter before pulling to within one at the halfway mark. The Indians came on strong in the third to take a five-point lead into the final period where they blitzed Scott City 24-12 to win going away. Puxico's record climbed to 3 & 7 on the year while Scott City's fell to 1 & 8. Will Smith of Puxico was most of the story as he burned the nets for 26 points. Gary Sample had 16 for the losers.

Puxico claimed the double win on the evening as the junior varsity outscrapped the Rams 49-45. Randy Campbell was high for Puxico with 15. Bob Campbell had 11 for Scott City.

Reindeer win

CLARKTON - Clutch free-throw shooting in the final seconds of the game won a close one for Clarkton here Friday night. The Reindeer jumped off to a 21-14 lead in the first quarter and saw it evaporate to three at halftime. A little daylight showed through in the third as Clarkton upped their lead to 9 at 57-48. But then came the Bernie charge as the Mules tied it up 68-68 with only seconds left on the clock. That's when Clarkton's Mike Stillman stepped to the charity line and calmly sank his first shot on a one-and-one to give the Reindeer the victory. Bernie's Reuben Steuven was the game's high point man with 21. Mickey Gum hooped 17 for Clarkton.

The Reindeer had a little easier time of it in the junior varsity contest as Clarkton completed the sweep on the night downing the Bernie JV 52-39. James Caldwell had 19 for the winners with the Carson brothers and Jim Pointer leading the Mules attack with 10 each.

Zalma beats Preps

CAPE GIRARDEAU — College High played it close for three quarters here Friday night before coming apart in the final frame to let Zalma take a 65-59 win. Down by only two points in the first quarter, the Preps stayed there at halftime before zipping into a 46-42 lead at the end of three. Foul trouble spelled the difference in the last eight minutes of play as the Bulldogs sank free throw after free throw to take the quarter 23-13 and the victory. Zalma wound up the game with a 21-7 edge over College High from the charity strip. Carl Lineberry paced Zalma's attack with 20 points on the night. Luke Cano had 21 for the College Preps.

The junior varsity contest wa just as hotly contested with the result reversed as College High took it 45-44. High point man for the game with 28 was Dennis Wheetly of Zalma. College High's Paul Nunnelee ended with 14.

Tigers upset Malden

NEELYVILLE — The Malden Greenwave failed to overcome the foul-shooting of Neelyville here Friday night, losing to the Tigers 79-76. Malden outshot the host from the field 36-28 but the Tigers managed a whooping 23-4 advantage from the free throw line to claim the victory. Neelyville led in the game through the first two quarters before the Greenwave pulled out front by two in the third period. Then the charity stripe started giving the Tigers the edge as they took the final quarter 19-14 to win the game and move their season's mark to 7 & 3. The loss dropped Malden to 4 & 4 on the year. Leonard Thompson again the hot hand for Malden as he pumped in 26 to lead all scorers. Teammate Clarence Sherrod, playing on a sprained ankle, still netted 16 in a game effort, too. High man for Neelyville was Dean Deckard with 25.

Malden salvaged part of the night with an overtime victory in the JV contest over Neelyville 75-72. Melvin James shoveled in 29 markers for Malden as Andrew Robinson and James Pattey led the Tigers with 18 apiece.

Matthews downs Eagles

MATTHEWS The MHS Pirates fell behind by three points, 21-18, but came on strong in beating the Oran Eagles here Friday night.

Thw two teams started out running and firing the ball at the baskets but the Pirates had the most success in the finding the hoop as they hit 34 field goal shots to 29 for the Eagles.

After the Eagles enjoyed a 21-18 first period lead Matthews began to press and forced Oran into turnovers and the Pirates defense caused the Eagles to lose sight of the basket and the home team forged ahead 42-34 at the half.

Oran was unable to solve the Pirates defense in the third period and Matthews increased their lead by outscoring Oran 20-15 to put the game out of reach. Oran outpointed the Pirates by two points in the fourth period.

Matthews had all five starters on target as four players scored in double figures with David Kenedy dropping in 16 for high game honnors. Ronnie Hurts scored 19 for the Eagles.

Matthews won the junior varsity game 59-50 as Art Vann scored 15 points for Matthews and Friga scored 17 for Oran.

Eagles beat Chaffee

EAST PRAIRIE - The Chaffee Red Devils just couldn't handle the EPHS Eagles on the latters home court and the Eagles won their first Scott-Mississippi conference game 66-58 here Friday night.

Chaffee out gunned the home team in the first period with David McConnell and Lindy Duncan dropping in the point but the Red Devils defense allowed Donald Dixon and Grady Williford to first back and East Prairie's two gunners were more powerful than the two guns for Chaffee.

Chaffee ran to a 19-14 first period lead and held onto the advantage through the second period as both teams exchanged baskets for 19 points apiece.

East Prairie's defense became more aggressive in the second half and the Eagles slowed Duncan and McConnell as Williford and Dixon came on stronger and EPHS outscored the visitors 14-10 in the third quarter.

Chaffee's shooting fell off again in the last period and the home team advantage paid off for East Prairie as the Eagles scored 19 points to only 10 for Chaffee.

Duncan and McConnell scored 22 and 21 points respectively and Dixon and Williford scored 26 points apiece for the Eagles.

The loss left Chaffee with a 7-3 record and East Prairie is 5-8.

Hayti upsets Lions

SENATH — North Pemiscot gunned down Delta C-7 in the Senath-Hornersville Tournament here Friday night 73-40. Dominating the basket and the boards, the Mustangs swept to their 12th victory of the year to go with just one defeat. The Chargers were unable to break the double-figure mark until the fourth period when they broke through the Mustangs reserves for a 1915 advantage. But it was a case of much too little too late as NPHS had already built a 58-21 lead at the end of three quarters. Ray Dunbar's 18 points was high for North Pemiscot and Thomas Mead matched that total for Delta C-7.

Hayti used a 34-20 lead at halftime to hang on for a final 53-51 victory over Senath in the night-cap. Senath defensed the Indians well in the second half but couldn't come back from a 22-11 Hayti second quarter. Today in U. S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Saturday, Jan. 11, the eleventh day of 1975. There are 354 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1943, during World War II, the United States and Britain relinquished extraterritorial rights in China.

On this date —

In 1569, the first lottery in England was drawn in St. Paul's Cathedral under the patronage of Queen Elizabeth the First.

In 1756, the first Secretary of the U.S. Treasury, Alexander Hamilton, was born on Nevis Island in the West Indies.

In 1788, a band of colonists set out for Ohio from Hartford, Connecticut.

In 1861, Albama seceded from the Union.

In 1962, an avalanche buried a village in the Andes in Peru, and 3,000 persons were reported killed.

In 1964, Panama suspended diplomatic relations with the U.S. after clashes between Panamanian students and American troops in the Panama Canal Zone.

Ten years ago: Communist Rumania and France signed a five-year cultural agreement and announced that an economic accord was about ready for signature.

Five years ago: In Nigeria, the 32-month-old secessionist Biafran regime collapsed under onslaughts by the Nigerian central government.

One year ago: The health insurance plans, Blue Cross and Blue Shield, agreed in principle to merge their operations.

Today's birthdays: Writer Alan Paton is 72 years old. Actress Eva le Gaillienne is 76.

Thought for today: I like work. It fascinates me. I can sit and look at it for hours — Jerome Jerome, English humorist, 1859-1927.

New alternatives for old fescue pastures

By JOHN D. GARRETT
Area Agronomy Specialist

BENTON--While driving around the county the past year, I have seen several small acreages of fescue with no livestock on them. I know several small herds have been sold for economic purposes. The question now is, "What should be done with those fescue pastures with no livestock to graze them."

I believe there are four important alternatives to select from: (1) fertilize with nitrogen and harvest seed; (2) leave as is, and hope cattle market recovers and restock; (3) destroy stand by plowing or chemical and plant corn, soybeans or grain sorghum; (4) fertilize with nitrogen in late February or early March and harvest for hay.

The final decision will be up to the farmer, but I would like to point out that good pastures are hard to establish. If there is a possibility more cattle may be purchased in the next year or so, the pasture should not be destroyed. Also, many pastures consist of small acreages, and are hard to cultivate. This is another reason for leaving them.

If you definitely intend to stay out of the cattle business and the field is large enough to justify equipment moving in and out, the old sod should be destroyed and row cropped. The food supply is too short to allow good land to go unproductive.

In the event the decision is made to keep the pasture and harvest for seed, nitrogen should be applied in the near future. The seed can be sold for a nice profit and the remaining forage can be cut, cured and rolled into bales for winter feed. This can also be sold with no trouble.

January and early February is a good time to apply N to fescue fields from which seed is to be harvested next summer. If nitrogen is applied later than early February, the result is often excessive plant growth rather than heavier seed heads.

If N was applied last summer or early fall, additional N will be needed for maximum seed yield. Most of that N was used by the fall growth or lost.

If no nitrogen was applied last fall, then 70 to 100 pounds should be applied this winter. If 60 to 100 pounds was used in the fall, topdress with 40 to 60 pounds of actual N. Phosphorus and potassium levels should be maintained at least in the medium range. On straight fescue stands, the PH should be maintained at 5.5 or above.

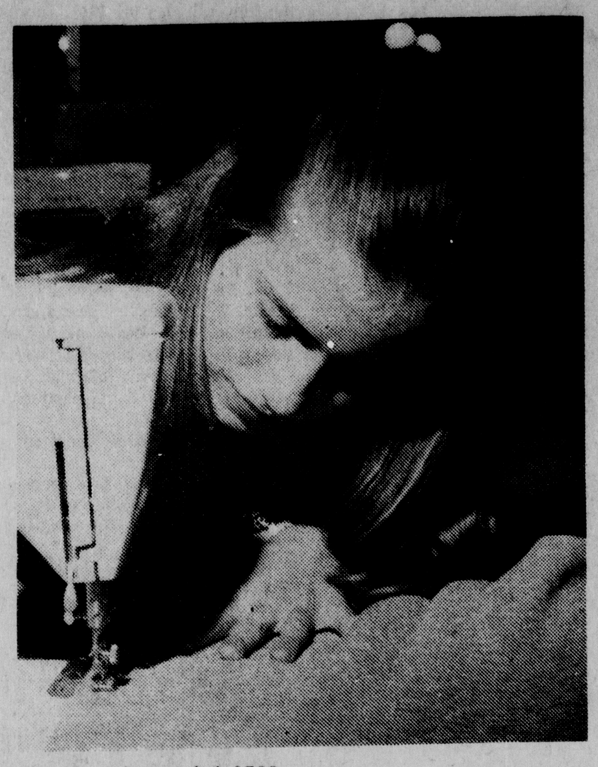
If fescue is to be harvested for seed and cattle happen to still be grazing, they should be taken off spring growth before March 15. Failure to do this is likely to result in many of the potential seed heads being grazed off.

After the seed are harvested, the stubble should be clipped to three or four inches. This should be done as soon as possible after harvest. This residue can be baled and sold or stored for winter feed.

Failure to clip the stubble may reduce the following year's seed crop by as much as 30 per cent. The new growth should be moderately grazed.

During the annual clam festival at Annapolis, Md., visitors consumed 8.5 tons of fried clams and 7.5 tons of steamed ones.

4-H youths create their own styles in clothing



Creativity and practicality combine when 4-H boys and girls get behind a sewing machine. Youths enrolled in the national 4-H clothing program learn to create clothing styles that are economical to make and which fit their own personality and needs.

Over 736 boys and girls are active in the program, which is supervised by the Cooperative Extension Service. The young 4-H clothing stylists enjoy using their imagination and creativity to construct clothes that are best for them.

The 4-H'ers learn proper sewing techniques in the program. Using fabrics, threads, patterns and accessories, the youths create pleasing outfits and styles. The youths are also eligible for incentive and recognition awards provided by Coats & Clark, Inc., donor of awards in the 4-H clothing program. In 1974, nearly 10,000 youths will be honored with medals, trips and educational scholarships for their efforts in the program.

Arranged by the National 4-H Service Committee, a maximum of four medals of honor will be awarded 4-H'ers in each county, while a top member from each state receives an expense-paid trip to National 4-H Congress in Chicago, Dec. 1-5.

During 4-H Congress, six national winners will be announced and awarded $700 scholarships courtesy of Coats & Clark.

Youths in the program create clothing styles based on their own ideas. Debbie Kuck, 19, of Petaluma, Calif., a 1973 national winner in 4-H clothing did just that. In her nine years in the program, Miss Kuck constructed some 270 garments and in the process she discovered a real interest in designing her own clothes. Says Miss Kuck, "I add my own touches to everything I make as well as design complete outfits from scratch."

In addition to her designing efforts, the Sonoma County girl also taught sewing skills to a group of low income families as part of her 4-H clothing activities.

For more information on the 4-H clothing program contact the county extension service office.

Cattlemen take liking to local breweries

COLUMBIA--Lately, some cattlemen have been taking a liking to their local brewery.

While you could hardly blame them, the way the cattle market has been going, you should know that it isn't the brew they want.

It's the brewers' grains--barley, corn and rice that remain after some of the carbohydrates are extracted in brewing beer and ale.

The stuff is 29 per cent protein.

"It's superior to urea or other non-protein nitrogen sources as a livestock feed," reported G.B. Thompson, University of Missouri-Columbia animal scientist. "And it's at least as good or better than soybean oil meal."

It contains a much needed roughage.

"Cattlemen need roughage if they want to use a self-feeder," explained Thompson. "Many are now buying cotton seed hulls, which have almost no energy value, to mix with their corn concentrate so the feed mix can be self-fed. With brewers grains, they would have the dry feed, the roughage and the protein that really work well in a self-feeding operation."

The brewers' grains are good for the health of cattle.

"We found that brewers' grains present liver abscesses in cattle and certain digestive disturbances, including bloat and foundering," said Thompson. "Lab studies indicate that the grains keep the rumen from becoming too acid."

"It's that extreme acidity in this "digestive vat" stomach compartment which causes ailments in cattle and other ruminants.

The University of Missouri and Anheuser-Busch, St. Louis brewers whose funding supports some of Thompson's research, were recently granted a patent to market brewers' grains--claiming prevention of liver abscesses in cattle when mixed with five to 15 per cent of a high grain diet.

But Thompson sees a real advantage of brewers' grains as an energy source. About 68 per cent of the given weight of the brewers' grains will provide digestible nutrients for cattle. That's pretty good. The figure for corn is 80 per cent.

But the problem is getting the grains to where the cattle are. Right now, rail costs make westward shipment from the Anheuser-Busch brewery virtually prohibitive. Thompson is currently working with the brewery to see if some truck shipments might be developed, or if nearby cattlemen might work out a system for picking up their own grains.

"Brewers' grains have been running about $50 to $114 a ton," noted Thompson. "Other protein sources, like soybean oil meal, run over $300 a ton.

"While the soy meal is 44 per cent protein, compared to the brewers' grains' 29 per cent, we think the brewers' grain would still be a good buy. Besides being a little cheaper on a cost-per-pound-of-protein basis, we think it would be better feed.

"Our studies indicate that brewers' grains may be better because they're not as soluble. In other words, they are more slowly converted to ammonia in the rumen, or they may bypass the rumen fermentation process completely. Either way, the animal has more time to capture more protein and utilize it."

As Thompson continues his research, he is continually impressed with cattle and other ruminants whose stomachs act as fermentation vats for converting roughages like grass and silage into meat and milk.

"When we learn as much about controlling fermentation in the rumen as the brewers know about the beer-making process," said Thompson, "we'll have come a long way."

Young farmers hold meeting

Fred Burrows of Sikeston, representing the Missouri Mutual Insurance Co., spoke on workman's compensation insurance at the Jan. 6 meeting of the New Madrid County Young Farmers Association at the Howardville Vocational-Technical school.

The group will hold a dutch treat rib supper at the Hickory Log Restaurant in Dexter at 6:30 p.m. Monday, and will meet again at 7 p..m. Jan. 20 when E. B. Nace will speak on the price commodity outlook for 1975.

Tom Essary of Matthews is president of the group and Harvey Stockton of Catron is vice-president, David Snider of Matthews is secretary- treasurer and Larry Riley of Bernie is reporter

MFA leaders urge action to reduce production costs

Farmers must have more in the way of price protection if they are to meet demands for expanded food and feed production next year, according to a consensus reached by local farm leaders attending a farm leadership conference Dec. 17 at the Ramada Inn at Sikeston sponsored by Midcontinent Farmers Association were adamant in their expression that upward adjustments in loan and target prices must be made to reflect increases in farm production costs.

The group, including farmers from Arkansas, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri, said the Congress should take immediate action to provide needed protection when it convenes again next month.

To help bolster farm price protection, the MFA farm leaders advocated inclusion of soybeans in the regulra farm program. They took strong exception to ecretary of Agriculture Earl Butz's recent decision to eliminate all price support for soybeans.

In other recommendations, the farm leaders called for a national reserve of farm commodities, with the understanding that it would be built from commodities in surplus supply and subject to release only at price sufficiently above parity so as not to interfere with normal farm marketing.

It was noted that current depressed cotton prices could be strengthened by shifting some of the surplus production into a reserve for use in years of short supply.

The MFA farm leaders called for legislative and administrative changes in the current disaster programs that would insure needed protection to farmers and equitable treatment among producers of the various farm commodities. In this connection, the group urged an improved federal crop insurance program that would provide meaningful protection at rates farmers could afford to pay.

Recognizing that inadequate price supports are causing more and more farmers to turn to forward contracting of crops as a form of protection against price calamities, they called for government action to insure that both buyers and sellers fulfill contract commitments. It was noted that farmers have no recourse against firms that fail to honor contracts because of financial difficulties. It was urged that action be taken in time to protect farmers against losses on the 1975 crop.

Interest rates on CCC loans which have increased from 5.5 per cent to 9.375 per cent during the past year were criticized as being against the will of the Congress. The farmers stressed that CCC loans were supposed to assist in orderly marketing and that interest rates were never intended to reflect commercial levels. They asked that legislative restraints be placed on CCC loan interest rates to prevent the Secretary of Agriculture from making excessive interest charges.

On inflation, which the MFA discussion leaders termed as having no parallel in U.S. history, local Delta farmers called for early and effective actions by the Congress and the administration to deal with the situation. They urged that a continuation of high interest, high prices on all farm inputs, high prices on almost everything and a high rate of unemployment could have disastrous effects on the economy as a whole.

Other matters considered by the farm leadership conference included fuel conservation measures, pollution controls, regional planning, usury laws and compliance with pesticide regulations.

MFA officials participating in the conference included president Fred V. Heinkel and vice presidents Ray Young, Stuart Spradling and Clell Carpenter of Columbia and Hilton Bracey of Portageville.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Record numbers of Americans put cash into Christmas Club accounts to insure inflation wouldn't lighten the load in Santa's sack in 1974.

Nearly 19 million people — 6 per cent more than 1973 — saved more than $3.75 billion in Christmas Club accounts during 1974, the American Bankers Assn. reports. The average depositor saved an estimated $205 this year compared with $182 last year to boost Yule Club deposits 12 per cent in 1974.

MR. FARMER.....
1970 was a good year! That was the year when you bought fertilizer for $55 per ton, an 80 horsepower tractor for $7,000, and money cost was 7%. This will not be the case for 1975! Things have changed drastically, and so has the need for accurate farm records. Production Credit Association is introducing AGRIFAX '75, the latest development in electronic farm records; with payroll option, earning statements, and tax information. New alternatives for old fescue pastures

By JOHN D. GARRETT
Area Agronomy Specialist

BENTON--While driving around the county the past year, I have seen several small acreages of fescue with no livestock on them. I know several small herds have been sold for economic purposes. The question now is, "What should be done with those fescue pastures with no livestock to graze them."

I believe there are four important alternatives to select from: (1) fertilize with nitrogen and harvest seed; (2) leave as is, and hope cattle market recovers and restock; (3) destroy stand by plowing or chemical and plant corn, soybeans or grain sorghum; (4) fertilize with nitrogen in late February or early March and harvest for hay.

The final decision will be up to the farmer, but I would like to point out that good pastures are hard to establish. If there is a possibility more cattle may be purchased in the next year or so, the pasture should not be destroyed. Also, many pastures consist of small acreages, and are hard to cultivate. This is another reason for leaving them.

If you definitely intend to stay out of the cattle business and the field is large enough to justify equipment moving in and out, the old sod should be destroyed and row cropped. The food supply is too short to allow good land to go unproductive.

In the event the decision is made to keep the pasture and harvest for seed, nitrogen should be applied in the near future. The seed can be sold for a nice profit and the remaining forage can be cut, cured and rolled into bales for winter feed. This can also be sold with no trouble.

January and early February is a good time to apply N to fescue fields from which seed is to be harvested next summer. If nitrogen is applied later than early February, the result is often excessive plant growth rather than heavier seed heads.

If N was applied last summer or early fall, additional N will be needed for maximum seed yield. Most of that N was used by the fall growth or lost.

If no nitrogen was applied last fall, then 70 to 100 pounds should be applied this winter. If 60 to 100 pounds was used in the fall, topdress with 40 to 60 pounds of actual N. Phosphorus and potassium levels should be maintained at least in the medium range. On straight fescue stands, the PH should be maintained at 5.5 or above.

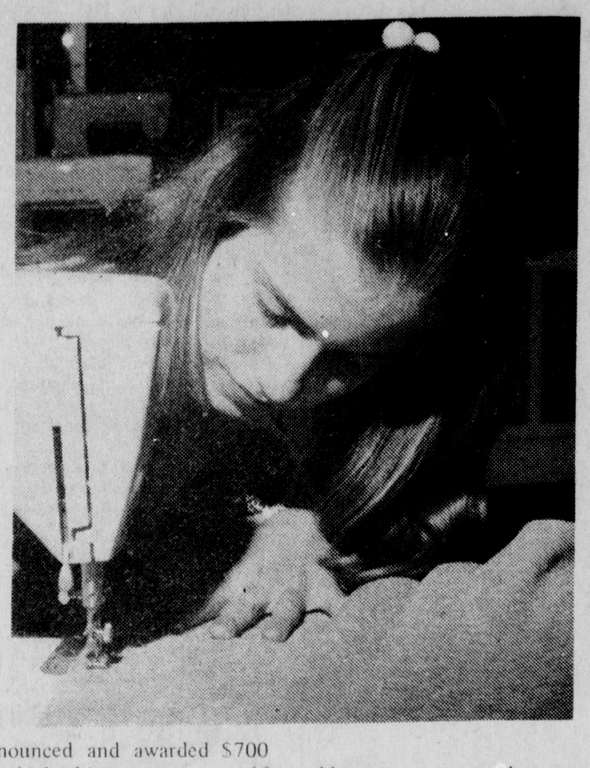
If fescue is to be harvested for seed and cattle happen to still be grazing, they should be taken off spring growth before March 15. Failure to do this is likely to result in many of the potential seed heads being grazed off.

After the seed are harvested, the stubble should be clipped to three or four inches. This should be done as soon as possible after harvest. This residue can be baled and sold or stored for winter feed.

Failure to clip the stubble may reduce the following year's seed crop by as much as 30 per cent. The new growth should be moderately grazed.

During the annual clam festival at Annapolis, Md., visitors consumed 8.5 tons of fried clams and 7.5 tons of steamed ones.

4-H youths create their own styles in clothing



Creativity and practicality combine when 4-H boys and girls get behind a sewing machine. Youths enrolled in the national 4-H clothing program learn to create clothing styles that are economical to make and which fit their own personality and needs.

Over 736 boys and girls are active in the program, which is supervised by the Cooperative Extension Service. The young 4-H clothing stylists enjoy using their imagination and creativity to construct clothes that are best for them.

The 4-H'ers learn proper sewing techniques in the program. Using fabrics, threads, patterns and accessories, the youths create pleasing outfits and styles. The youths are also eligible for incentive and recognition awards provided by Coats & Clark, Inc., donor of awards in the 4-H clothing program. In 1974, nearly 10,000 youths will be honored with medals, trips and educational scholarships for their efforts in the program.

Arranged by the National 4-H Service Committee, a maximum of four medals of honor will be awarded 4-H'ers in each county, while a top member from each state receives an expense-paid trip to National 4-H Congress in Chicago, Dec. 1-5.

During 4-H Congress, six national winners will be announced and awarded $700 scholarships courtesy of Coats & Clark.

Youths in the program create clothing styles based on their own ideas. Debbie Kuck, 19, of Petaluma, Calif., a 1973 national winner in 4-H clothing did just that. In her nine years in the program, Miss Kuck constructed some 270 garments and in the process she discovered a real interest in designing her own clothes. Says Miss Kuck, "I add my own touches to everything I make as well as design complete outfits from scratch."

In addition to her designing efforts, the Sonoma County girl also taught sewing skills to a group of low income families as part of her 4-H clothing activities.

For more information on the 4-H clothing program contact the county extension service office.

Tornado kills 7 in Mississippi

MCCOMB, Miss. (AP) — A tornado ripped a two-mile swath through McComb Friday, leveling businesses and homes, shredding trees and injuring more than 100 persons.

Officials said four persons died in McComb and three others in a nearby rural area. They originally said 10 persons had died in the most fierce of a series of tornadoes which lashed the state between 8 and 10 a.m. Friday.

Three persons were reported dead on arrival at a local medical center, and another at a McComb funeral home. Officials said an elderly man and a mother and her daughter were killed near the small Ruth community north of McComb.

Hospital officials said 101 of McComb's 12,000 residents were treated for injuries, with 10 admitted for continuing treatment here and seven sent to other hospitals. Two of those admitted here were listed in critical condition.

Identities of the dead were not immediately available.

The storm system which spawned the McComb tornado sent another twister thundering past the nearby Summit community. There, the North Pike Elementary School was severely damaged as 350 students huddled in the hallways, carrying out a tornado drill that saved most of them from injury.

Other tornadoes struck in an elbow-shaped path extending north from McComb to Jackson, 90 miles to the south, then across to Columbus in northeast Mississippi. Considerable property damage was reported in several areas.

"The tornado made a path all the way through the city ... about two miles," said William Hewitt, assistant administrator for the Southwest Mississippi Regional Medical Center in McComb.

The funnel missed the hospital, but dipped into the Southwest Mall shopping center across the street as its stores were preparing to open. One end of the center was demolished.

The tornado flattened the city's National Guard armory, then rumbled through the fashionable residential section on McComb's north side.

Utility lines were downed, and the medical center had to use an emergency power generator. Telephone communications were stilled.

Ambulances were sent from Marion, Franklin and Walthall counties to help carry out the injured.

The tornadoes sprang from a general weather system that released other twisters in Alabama, Texas and Louisiana.

Tornadoes accompanied by heavy thunderstorms struck in Alabama late the afternoon. Several persons were injured near Graysville and Jonestown. Both towns are noth of Birmingham.

In Louisiana, a total of nine persons were hospitalized with injuries and there was at least one weather-related death. Officials had earlier reported at least two dead.

Pierre seeks master

Pierre licks his chops at the thought of finding a new home and leaving the city dog pound forever. Poor Piere lost his home Friday when the family which formerly had him had to give him to humane officer Bob Beardsley. Pierre is housebroken and has had all of his shots. Anyone interested in adopting him may contact Beardsley today or next week at the police station. Beardsley says he expects Pierre to be adopted very early. (Daily Standard photo)

Belt tightening marks early '75

The first full week of 1975 brought new signs that Americans are buying less of just about everything in an effort to stretch family budgets.

Statistics on economic indicators such as housing and auto sales, consumer credit and capital outlays came as government officials talked about tax cuts to encourage people to spend money and ease the recession.

Administration officials said Friday that President Ford has decided to seek a tax cut of about $15 billion. They also said he was considering an unusual plan of tax rebates whereby millions of Americans could receive government checks equal to about 10 per cent of their 1974 income tax.

Among the figures on spending: —The nation's four major auto makers reported that Americans bought 23 per cent fewer cars in 1974 than they did in 1973. Including imports, 1974 sales were 8,856,448, well below the 10 million or more new cars the industry officials had expected they would sell.

—The National Association of Realtors said sales of single-family homes during November were 11.3 per cent below the same period in 1973 and 16 per cent below 1972. It was the third consecutive month in which sales were more than 10 per cent below comparable figures for 1972.

The association said the median price of an existing single-family home in November was $32,130 — 8.1 per cent above the price for the same month of 1973. But there was one encouraging sign: the increase was the smallest year-to-year price advance for all of 1974, an indication that the sharp climb in the cost of housing may be easing.

—The Federal Reserve Board said there was a decline in consumer credit in November for the first time since late in 1970. Statistics showed that Americans owed $402 million less in November than they did in October, with the biggest cutbacks coming in borrowing for new cars and personal loans.

—The Commerce Department reported that businesses are expected to spend only 4.6 per cent more this year in plant and equipment outlays than they did last year. Since the costs of building materials and labor are expected to rise about 7 per cent, the expenditures will mark a drop in "real capital spending." It's the first such decline since 1971.

In a related development, the Labor Department released figures on Friday showing that the November and December decline in nonfarm payroll jobs was the largest two-month drop since 1945. Officials said 1.1 million jobs were lost in the two-month period. The December drop was most severe in manufacturing industries.

Industry and government leaders talked about a varjety of solutions to ease unemployment, halt inflation and generally get the economy moving again.

—The Labor Department allocated an additional $787 million in federal money to states and cities in order to provide funds for 100,600 public service jobs. The money comes on top of $955 million allocated in 1974 to provide 200,000 jobs. More than 6.5 million Americans were unemployed last month and the Labor Department said that localities were not spending the federal money fast enough to help.

—Chrysler Corp., with a huge stockpile of unsold 1975 modzl cars, disclosed plans for a five-week rebate program starting Monday. The company will offer buyers of certain new cars and trucks between $200 and $400. Three firms that supply parts to the auto industry announced they would give a $100 bonus to any employe buying a new car and Chrysler said it would match the bonus.

—The Transportation Department urged a 10 per cent rollback in domestic air fares. The department, noting the airlines had one of their most profitable years in 1974, said the rollback would fight inflation and increase the number of passengers. The Air Transport Association reported that despite losses suffered by Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines, the domestic airline industry will have a 1974 net profit of about $350 million, the fourth highest in history.

Brooks charged with assault

EAST PRAIRIE--A charge of public assault was filed Thursday against Norman Brooks of East Prairie in connection with a fight between Brooks and Stanley Bell, 18, also of East Prairie.

The incident occurred about 3:45 p.m. Thursday on the parking lot of the Double B Drive-in. Brooks reportedly hit Bell with a tire tool during an argument over Brooks' daughter.

Bell was treated for head and hand injuries at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston and released.

John Dean infamy prompts name change

BROWNSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — John Dean — the Brownsville, Ky., lawyer, not the one who worked in the Nixon White House — was hearing a lot of jokes, snide remarks and laughter when he introduced himself.

The famous name was making him an innocent victim of Watergate, he said, so he went to court and had it changed.

Now it's plain Nathaniel John Balthazar Bumppo.

His friends can call him Natty for short, Bumppo told Louisville Courier-Journal columnist Billy Reed. "I figure if I'm going to raise eyebrows, I might as well do it with a name I choose. You might as well go all the way.

"Man, understand, I'm not putting down John Dean," Bumppo said. "I think he's a national hero for ratting on Nixon. I admire the guy, it's just that I don't want to be confused with him."

The 34-year-old lawyer said he didn't lift the name Natty Bumppo from the pages of "The Deerslayer," James Femimore Cooper's classic novel.

In fact he hasn't read the book, and now he doesn't intend to. "I don't want to go through another identity crisis," he said.

Bumppo said he found the name in "Nixon Agonistes," a book by Garry Wills.

"I just liked the name, that's all," he said. So far, he added, he has noted no negative reaction in this Edmonson County community.

"I was afraid of that, but the only reactions I've gotten so far are positive," he said. "Most people think it's a great idea, but one of my clients didn't like it when her 10-year-old son heard about it and wanted to change his name to Evel Knievel."

Since he changed his name, his wife has also changed hers, Bumppo said. She is now Dorothy Zooey Natalie Bumppo, and their Christmas cards were signed "Natty and Natalie Bumppo."

She didn't mind, he said, "she loved it. She's just as crazy as I am."

Nixon expenses top $367,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the first three months after Richard M. Nixon's resignation, the government spent at least $367,878 to support the former president and his staff, White House officials said Friday.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the itemized list of expenses totaling $367,878 is "not comparable" to the $200,000 voted by Congress for Nixon's transition. He said only part had been charged against the $200,000.

Nessen also disclosed that White House aides and Nixon representatives have been negotiating the possible return to the former president of such memorabilia as his collection of cartoons, model elephants, gavels and gowns belonging to his daughters and wife. At present, he said, Nixon does not have access to the memorabilia collected while he was in office.

The press secretary reported the $367,878 spending total when questioned about a breakdown of expenditures by syndicated columnist Jack Anderson on Friday.

Nessen read from a Nov. 18, 1974, letter from Budget Director Roy L. Ash to Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of a House subcommittee which has investigated government spending on Nixon's private residences. Nessen said the letter listed these categories of spending for the period from Aug. 9, 1974 to Nov. 7: —$107,000 for salaries of White House, Defense Department and other government agencies detailed to the former president.

—$47,000 in per diem expenses for these government employes to help pay their living expenses in San Clemente.

—$2,419 for miscellaneous travel, including airline tickets for flights between Washington and San Clemente by the detailed officials.

—$8,440 for the portion of Nixon's Aug. 9 flight from Washington to "a point near Jefferson City, Mo.," where he ceased to be president. The cost of the rest of the flight to California was paid for by the military on orders of President Ford, Nessen said, adding that he did not have a figure for that.

—$3,147 for the estimated cost of Interior Department personnel who loaded the Nixon family belongings into a van on the White House lawn.

—$2,000 for gasoline for a dozen leased vehicles used by the government employes assigned to San Clemente, but not by Nixon himself.

—$9,172 for office expenses in San Clemente.

—$83,000 to crate and store Nixon papers in such facilities as the National Archives and the Executive Office Building.

—$30,000 for such expenses as courier flights from Washington to San Clemente and for the operating expenses of communications facilities.

—$52,160 spent by the General Services Administration to maintain and operate office facilities at San Clemente.

—$23540 spent by GSA for operation and maintenance of facilities at Key Biscayne, Fla.

The law allowing transition expenses of former presidents states that the government will maintan an office for them. When asked why the government had paid the expenses of operations in both San Clemente and Key Biscayne, Nessen responded he had "no way of going beyond the figures to a philosophical justification of them."

Responding to questions, Nessen said the list of White House officials detailed to Nixon's staff now totals 14. He said they will go off the White House payroll Feb. 9.

He said he did not have figures on the amount spent by the government since the Nov. 7 cutoff in Ash's letter.

Draft evader's job bows to public protest

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Swamped by a flood of public protest, Palm Beach County officials fired a Vietnam war draft evader four days after he began his alternate service under President Ford's amnesty program.

Albert Gargiulo, 28, had become an acute political embarrassment, officials said in announcing his dismissal from the county engineer's staff Thursday.

"Only the man himself can take the embarrassment off of us," county commissioner Lake Lytal said. "If he stays, his job and even his life in the community is going to be very unpleasant.

"You have no idea what this means to people," Lytal said.

Gargiulo, who holds a master's degree in engineering, fled the draft during the height of American military involvement in Vietnam. He spent four years in South America, according to Lytal, before deciding to return to the United States.

Lytal said part of the problem was Gargiulo's $11,000-a-year salary.

"I had one mother tell me 'I lost my son and all I got was a flag. This man hid and now he gets a good-paying job,'" Lytal said. "They think he's being rewarded for avoiding what fathers and sons died for.

"They sure in hell don't want to forgive."

Gargiulo remained secluded in his home with his wife and 2-year-old son after his firing. He would not speak with reporters.

"He is under great mental and physical strain," said Gargiulo's brother Frank, a county employe.

"We have good reason to be afraid ... for personal security reasons."

Gargiulo's attorney, Louis Sabatino of Miami, said he will "go to Washington or wherever necessary to fight this disgraceful thing."

Lytal, a county commissioner for 30 years, said the public furor over Gargiulo's hiring was unparalleled. "I've had more calls on that than anything, and all of them were against him."

Robert Culpepper, county commission chairman, said he will recommend "disciplinary action" next week against the county officials who hired Gargiulo. He called the hiring a "clear violation" of county policy — becoming involved in a federal program without the commission's knowledge.

EAST PRAIRIE--A charge of public assault was filed Thursday against Norman Brooks of East Prairie in connection with a fight between Brooks and Stanley Bell, 18, also of East Prairie.

The incident occurred about 3:45 p.m. Thursday on the parking lot of the Double B Drive-in. Brooks reportedly hit Bell with a tire tool during an argument over Brooks' daughter.

Bell was treated for head and hand injuries at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston and released.

IN CASE SPAIN WANTED IT BACK

PORT ROYAL, Jamaica (AP) — Outstanding among the sights of Port Royal is Fort Charles, which is located on the site of a fort the English erected in 1656 to guard the entrance of Kingston Harbor in the event the disgruntled Spaniards decided to reclaim their stolen property.

John Dean infamy prompts name change

BROWNSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — John Dean — the Brownsville, Ky., lawyer, not the one who worked in the Nixon White House — was hearing a lot of jokes, snide remarks and laughter when he introduced himself.

The famous name was making him an innocent victim of Watergate, he said, so he went to court and had it changed.

Now it's plain Nathaniel John Balthazar Bumppo.

His friends can call him Natty for short, Bumppo told Louisville Courier-Journal columnist Billy Reed. "I figure if I'm going to raise eyebrows, I might as well do it with a name I choose. You might as well go all the way.

"Man, understand, I'm not putting down John Dean," Bumppo said. "I think he's a national hero for ratting on Nixon. I admire the guy, it's just that I don't want to be confused with him."

The 34-year-old lawyer said he didn't lift the name Natty Bumppo from the pages of "The Deerslayer," James Femimore Cooper's classic novel.

In fact he hasn't read the book, and now he doesn't intend to. "I don't want to go through another identity crisis," he said.

Bumppo said he found the name in "Nixon Agonistes," a book by Garry Wills.

"I just liked the name, that's all," he said. So far, he added, he has noted no negative reaction in this Edmonson County community.

"I was afraid of that, but the only reactions I've gotten so far are positive," he said. "Most people think it's a great idea, but one of my clients didn't like it when her 10-year-old son heard about it and wanted to change his name to Evel Knievel."

Since he changed his name, his wife has also changed hers, Bumppo said. She is now Dorothy Zooey Natalie Bumppo, and their Christmas cards were signed "Natty and Natalie Bumppo."

She didn't mind, he said, "she loved it. She's just as crazy as I am."

Nixon expenses top $367,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the first three months after Richard M. Nixon's resignation, the government spent at least $367,878 to support the former president and his staff, White House officials said Friday.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the itemized list of expenses totaling $367,878 is "not comparable" to the $200,000 voted by Congress for Nixon's transition. He said only part had been charged against the $200,000.

Nessen also disclosed that White House aides and Nixon representatives have been negotiating the possible return to the former president of such memorabilia as his collection of cartoons, model elephants, gavels and gowns belonging to his daughters and wife. At present, he said, Nixon does not have access to the memorabilia collected while he was in office.

The press secretary reported the $367,878 spending total when questioned about a breakdown of expenditures by syndicated columnist Jack Anderson on Friday.

Nessen read from a Nov. 18, 1974, letter from Budget Director Roy L. Ash to Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of a House subcommittee which has investigated government spending on Nixon's private residences. Nessen said the letter listed these categories of spending for the period from Aug. 9, 1974 to Nov. 7: —$107,000 for salaries of White House, Defense Department and other government agencies detailed to the former president.

—$47,000 in per diem expenses for these government employes to help pay their living expenses in San Clemente.

—$2,419 for miscellaneous travel, including airline tickets for flights between Washington and San Clemente by the detailed officials.

—$8,440 for the portion of Nixon's Aug. 9 flight from Washington to "a point near Jefferson City, Mo.," where he ceased to be president. The cost of the rest of the flight to California was paid for by the military on orders of President Ford, Nessen said, adding that he did not have a figure for that.

—$3,147 for the estimated cost of Interior Department personnel who loaded the Nixon family belongings into a van on the White House lawn.

—$2,000 for gasoline for a dozen leased vehicles used by the government employes assigned to San Clemente, but not by Nixon himself.

—$9,172 for office expenses in San Clemente.

—$83,000 to crate and store Nixon papers in such facilities as the National Archives and the Executive Office Building.

—$30,000 for such expenses as courier flights from Washington to San Clemente and for the operating expenses of communications facilities.

—$52,160 spent by the General Services Administration to maintain and operate office facilities at San Clemente.

—$23540 spent by GSA for operation and maintenance of facilities at Key Biscayne, Fla.

The law allowing transition expenses of former presidents states that the government will maintan an office for them. When asked why the government had paid the expenses of operations in both San Clemente and Key Biscayne, Nessen responded he had "no way of going beyond the figures to a philosophical justification of them."

Responding to questions, Nessen said the list of White House officials detailed to Nixon's staff now totals 14. He said they will go off the White House payroll Feb. 9.

He said he did not have figures on the amount spent by the government since the Nov. 7 cutoff in Ash's letter.

Draft evader's job bows to public protest

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Swamped by a flood of public protest, Palm Beach County officials fired a Vietnam war draft evader four days after he began his alternate service under President Ford's amnesty program.

Albert Gargiulo, 28, had become an acute political embarrassment, officials said in announcing his dismissal from the county engineer's staff Thursday.

"Only the man himself can take the embarrassment off of us," county commissioner Lake Lytal said. "If he stays, his job and even his life in the community is going to be very unpleasant.

"You have no idea what this means to people," Lytal said.

Gargiulo, who holds a master's degree in engineering, fled the draft during the height of American military involvement in Vietnam. He spent four years in South America, according to Lytal, before deciding to return to the United States.

Lytal said part of the problem was Gargiulo's $11,000-a-year salary.

"I had one mother tell me 'I lost my son and all I got was a flag. This man hid and now he gets a good-paying job,'" Lytal said. "They think he's being rewarded for avoiding what fathers and sons died for.

"They sure in hell don't want to forgive."

Gargiulo remained secluded in his home with his wife and 2-year-old son after his firing. He would not speak with reporters.

"He is under great mental and physical strain," said Gargiulo's brother Frank, a county employe.

"We have good reason to be afraid ... for personal security reasons."

Gargiulo's attorney, Louis Sabatino of Miami, said he will "go to Washington or wherever necessary to fight this disgraceful thing."

Lytal, a county commissioner for 30 years, said the public furor over Gargiulo's hiring was unparalleled. "I've had more calls on that than anything, and all of them were against him."

Robert Culpepper, county commission chairman, said he will recommend "disciplinary action" next week against the county officials who hired Gargiulo. He called the hiring a "clear violation" of county policy — becoming involved in a federal program without the commission's knowledge.
